Happy Birthday
What Is Big News?
Back to Cave Days
A Fighting Dog Mother

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL, one of W. R. Hearst's many newspapers, celebrated its 35th birthday yesterday, announcing a daily average circulation for 35 years of more than 600,000, and a total circulation of more than seven billion copies.

The newspaper which Mr. Hearst started from scratch 35 years ago, with S. S. Carvalho as publisher, interests newspaper publishers because of the Evening Journal's persistent domination in its field, more than double the circulation of any other evening newspaper in New York for more than 30 years.

Newspaper workers are interested because the Evening Journal pays the highest salaries in the newspaper profession, in one case more than three times the salary that the people pay the President, who gets only $75,000 a year.

The birthday of a successful newspaper raises the question: "WHAT IS THE NEWS?" The answer depends on the individual who asks the question. To a native in the Congo the big news tells about killing a hippopotamus, plenty of meat.

In Wall Street the important news is the fight between gold and silver, several nations following the example of England and saying, "Good bye gold, we can get along without you."

For farmers and housewives, the news is that potato growers in Maine get only 50 cents a barrel for potatoes that cost $1.25 to grow.

For everybody it is interesting, news that the Lindberghs are mapping out 8000 square miles of flooded territory in China, miserable, starving men and women rushing their plane, hoping to find food and finding only medicines.

Circulation managers, as important to newspapers as a mainspring to a watch, will be interested in this incident in the Evening Journal's career. One of the young editors whom W. R. Hearst had engaged decided on a certain day that the Evening Journal, which had then 40,000 circulation, must beat the Evening W. 325,000 circulation and accordingly shall be less the Word. I read take about seven years of hard work.

Four months later the Evening Journal guaranteed four times the circulation of the Evening World, which shows that a thing can be done when you are young.

One New York police story carries you back to ancient days.

Mario Barrone, young, good looking, entered this country from Italy illegally. Then he entered the home of Mrs. Margaret Merola aged 27, and stole her from her husband.

The police found Barrone, tied to a bed in an apartment where he lived with the stolen Mrs. Merola.

Barrone had been tortured with fire, and left to think it over. Mrs. Merola had vanished, and police believe she has been murdered.

Italians take such things seriously, so much so that the new criminal code recently adopted in Italy expressly exempts from any punishment a murder committed by an injured husband.

China's foreign minister, C. T. Wang, who has done his best to keep his distressed country out of another war, knows, to his sorrow, that men are fools and fools like war.

Attacked by a mob of students he was beaten over the head with clubs and inkpots and may die.

You may read in an old book on English sports of the horribly brutal test to which female fighting dogs were put, to make sure that their pups would be good fighters.

The female was put opposite another fighting dog, and after she had dashed at him, one of her front paws was cut off.

If she still continued fighting, that was a good sign. Then the other front paw was cut off. And if she again insisted on fighting, dashing at the enemy on her bleeding stumps, she was called good enough for breeding purposes and became the mother of fighting dogs, hobbling, mutilated, the rest of her life.

You can't blame her, but you can blame men that insist on fighting, after a great war has cut off the world's prosperity and happiness.

Louis Seibold, ablest political writer in the country, says truly that this is the time, if ever, for the Federal government to control and regulate the practices of the New York Stock Exchange, particularly in connection with "short selling," which is in fact a conspiracy against values.

NEAR DEATH IN POISONING

Frank Horoeby, 3, of 61 Middle st., is one of the Small Boston children who mistook poison pills for candy and ate them. Two children were killed outright and doctors fear for the lives of Frank, shown here at City Hospital, and of Louis Wardinski. (Staff photo.)

2 CHILDREN KILLED, 2 DYING OF PILLS

South Boston Youngsters Find Poison in Fire Ruins and Mistake it for Candy

Two children were dead today and two were dying as City Hospital from what is believed to be strychnine poisoning, as police resurged their [illegible] in South Boston for other possible victims of pills which caused the tragedy.

The dead children were Anna Wardinski, 5, and her brother, Walter, 2, of 74 Middle st.

The two dying are Louis Wardinski, another brother, and Frank Horoeby, 4, of 61 Middle st.

Parents of several other children living in the neighborhood were suffering great anxiety over the possibility their youngsters may have eaten some of the deadly pills.

THOUGHT THEM CANDY

The dead and dying were stricken after eating pills from bottles found in the ruins of a nearby box factory which burned a month ago.

Mistaking the poisonous pellets for candy, the younger Wardinski children and young Horoeby ate a number of them.

Louis Wardinski, reaching the scene some time after the pills were found, ate some of them and then became frightened when he saw his brother and sister in convulsions.

He collapsed in a nearby field, after warning his brother, Julius, 4, not to eat them.

At the hospital, where the dying children were taken by Mrs. Catherine Webb, a neighbor, Julius was held under observation, after it said he did not swallow the pills "because they tasted bad."

Walter and Arlene, who were declared to the street and fell to the sidewalk, died shortly after Mrs. Webb took them to the hospital.

SEEK OTHER VICTIMS

Sergt. Harry Pierce and a squad from headquarters hurried to the neighborhood and found a quantity of the pills, which they said were marked with a label which indicated a compound of strychnine. They immediately canvassed the homes in the vicinity to discover whether any other children had used the ruined factory as a playground.

According to police, it is possible that the children found the pills in a desk, the only article in the factory which was not destroyed by the blaze.

BOYS FLEE FIRE AT DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 29 (INS)—Fire destroyed Sigma Chi fraternity house on Dartmouth College campus today, causing $40,000 damage, injuring a student and a jewelry salesman and making 16 undergraduates temporarily homeless.

William Lang of Pittsburgh, a student, and Ralph Davis of Attleboro, Mass., the salesman, were slightly injured. Davis was a guest.

The college fire department, headed by William Norton of New Rochelle, N. Y., the famous Green varsity quarterback, and the local department, fought the blaze.

Several of the undergraduates jumped out of first floor windows and the others, after tossing some of thei pesonal belongings to the ground, ran down the smoke-filled hallways, coats and sweaters over their heads.

Coolidge's 1932 Stand First Told in American

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Calvin Coolidge's statement that he will not be a candidate for President next year, but will support Hoover for renomination, in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, will not surprise the readers of the Boston Evening American.

Those facts were definitely stated in this newspaper on April 29, five months ago to the day.

At that time, I wrote:—

"Coolidge 'aint going to run no more."

"He is as definitely out of politics as the fellow who recently ran in the Democratic candidate for United States Senator in Vermont. And that is out some."

Mr. Coolidge says in his article that he will support Hoover and urges his re-election.

Five months ago, we wrote, on that point:

"He declines to criticize Hoover, publicly or privately. His favorite response to comparisons between Hoover's record and his own is, 'Different men do things

HOOVER FEELS SAFE, NOW COOLIDGE IS REALLY OUT

PARTY EXCITED BY WORDS OF 'BIG DOUBT'

Definite Statement by Former President Rings Sweet in Ears of Leaders

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Sept. 29—Calvin Coolidge's announcement in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post that he does not propose to be a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1932, and that he considers it the duty of all good Republicans to support Herbert Hoover for a second term, caused a political sensation in Washington today.

Not since his eternal assertion "I do not choose to run for President in 1928" has any statement of Mr. Coolidge's created such a stir in political quarters.

His 1928 statement was enigmatic and susceptible of many interpretations, but in his current pronouncement Mr. Coolidge leaves no doubt as to his stand. He is going to support Mr. Hoover.

MAKES HOOVER FEEL EASY

Republican leaders were quick to predict that Mr. Coolidge's go-it to the party to rally behind Mr. Hoover would have the desired effect, and that it will dispel the last glimmering possibility of denying Mr. Hoover renomination next June.

Mr. Coolidge represented the only real threat to Mr. Hoover's renomination, in the opinion of party leaders, and now that he has effaced himself as completely, and coupled with it no forceful an appeal for general party support to his successor, there appears no other serious challenge to Mr. Hoover from any quarter.

Among Mr. Hoover's friends, and among administration officials generally, the Coolidge announcement was greeted with undisguised pleasure. They have always been haunted by the spectre of a Coolidge revival, and its disappearance in such an official and convincing manner brought broad smiles and real relief.

SOMEONE ELSE IN VIEW

Among the progressive insurgents who have been talking openly of revolt against Hoover's re-nomination there was apparent a disposition to view Mr. Coolidge's self-effacement as "clearing the way for somebody else."

Senator Bronkhart expressed himself succinctly today as follows:

"This second term recommendation for Mr. Hoover is wrong per se. If the Hoover administration had kept its pledges and if Mr. Hoover had been a real President he might well have another term, but since he turned things over to Mr. Mellon and the bankers, as he did, one term is too much. Mr. Hoover had better choose not to run."

HUNDREDS FLEE DENVER BOMBS

Denver, Col., Sept. 29 (AP)—Explosions of six bombs, one of which endangered the lives of 50 children in a church school last night were under police probe here today.

Police thought the first explosion in Valverde was due to small boys, but abandoned this theory when a blast rocked the Holy Family Church in North Denver.

Fifty members of a church school club dashed terrified from the building. The blast stopped the motion picture machine in the Oriental Theater across the street and hundreds of patrons rushed for exits.

Mrs. Mary Jackson, who lives near the church, told police she saw a "stout man" leave a car, walk up an alley behind the church school and run out just before the explosion.

A few minutes later a blast rocked a neighborhood a few blocks distant.

A fourth blast wrecked and set fire to a house owned by Custer Rand in Barnum.

NEGRESS NAMED 'WILDCAT' BY TWO LEVINES

Father and Brother of Slain Man Tell of "Temper Fits" and Poison in Food

Waterville, Me., Sept. 29—Eliminated from the murder of Abraham Levine, Mrs. Eleanor Johnson, negress housekeeper, was injected into the case again today by the victim's heartbroken father and elder brother.

Returning to the farmhouse, Louis Levine and his son, Milton, who were away at the time of the shooting, told of Mrs. Johnson's ungovernable temper and charged she had once threatened the entire family.

The elder Levine has been six weeks in Nevada, seeking a divorce from his wife, an inmate of an insane asylum at Augusta. With Milton, returned from the Aroostook County potato fields, he conferred with authorities in the room where his younger son was slain.

MADE SICK BY POISON

"Because of her temper," said Milton, "I have spent only two months at home during the more than two years Mrs. Johnson has been here."

He charged the negress with once "threatening the lives of the boys," and said the family at one time had been made violently ill by poison in the food.

Facing his brother Merton, who has admitted to authorities his friendship with Mrs. Johnson, he cried:

"You are really responsible for all this. Why didn't you fire her a long time ago when we wanted you to?"

WANTS A DETECTIVE

The father, who said his last instruction to the housekeeper was "Take good care of my boys," revealed she had written him in Nevada asking him not to remarry after he obtained his divorce.

Louis Levine expressed dissatisfaction with the way in which the official investigation of the slaying is being handled, and said he would probably hire a private detective.

Gate to Pole Is Open to All, Says Wilkins

EXCLUSIVE

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS.

Commander of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Transarctic Submarine Expedition. Copyright, 1931, throughout the World by New York American, Inc., Hearst Enterprises, Inc., and King Features Syndicate, Inc. All Rights Reserved. Reproduction Prohibited in Whole or in Part.

Aboard the Polar Submarine Nautilus, Bergen, Norway, Sept. 29—This is the last story from aboard the only submarine that has ever passed under the Arctic ice in the interests of civilization and science.

Jules Verne's "nautilus" was a product of the imagination of a forward-looking man. This present-day Nautilus—farewell to her—represents Jules Verne's idea come true. Although we did not reach the North Pole, all things being equal we would have.

At 9 o'clock yesterday the Nautilus' main battery switches were drawn, leaving in eerie darkness the craft in which, under flooding electric lights for every minute during the last 12 months men have worked and sweated or shivered with cold, hoping that their efforts would be productive of useful scientific knowledge.

Capt. Wilkins

WAIT FINAL WORD

With her ventilators open and her hatches sealed except for weekly inspection, the Nautilus is turned over to the Bergen Steamship Company for care until the United States Shipping Board decides whether we will, by some means, have to return to some Atlantic port or otherwise dispose of her.

For the last week, with the help of Norwegian navy yard officers and men, we have gone through the vessel from stem to stern, removing all special equipment supplied by the Wilkins-Ellsworth expedition, and which will suitably serve future Polar expeditions, whether by submarine or other modes.

The Geo-Physike Institute of Bergen, kindly and with the customs authorities' permission, are storing free the food, clothing and equipment remaining from the Nautilus' voyage across the Atlantic, through the North sea and under the Arctic ice.

We gained considerable useful, hard-earned experience, and it was only through the generous and kind tolerance of my friends, Lincoln Ellsworth, and others associated with the expedition, that we had courage steadfastly to goad on our vessel on, and in spite of all difficulties and dangers, pursue our course until the end of the season.

We have opened the gate leading to a field of extensive and important research; we have reached beneath the rugged, icy pavement to the polar cellars, collecting a handful of results.

I am well satisfied that the experience will make possible the construction of a submersible vessel reliably suited for Arctic service. The wealth of knowledge to be gained from the area about the Pole can hardly be collected unless the submarine is used. Some day, someone will collect it.

I have left the business of the expedition in the hands of Prof. Swerdrup, who has served us admirably in every way. Today I will be in London. I hope to leave for New York toward the end of the week.

Wilkins to Build Own Sub for Next Dive to Pole

London, Sept. 29 (INS)—Capt Sir Hubert Wilkins, Arctic explorer, arrived today and revealed that he was already planning another submarine expedition to the pole.

"I plan to make a new submarine expedition to the pole," Sir Hubert said, "but not in the Nautilus, whose mechanical equipment was too complicated for my small crew.

"I shall build the craft on the simplest possible lines, and believe I can safely reach the pole with such a vessel. The results of the Nautilus expedition completely justified the risks and expense involved."

U. S. Agents Grilled in Volpe Death Probe

Providence, R. I., Sept. 29 (AP)—Investigation into the murder on Sept. 17 of Harry Volpe, federal informer, who was "taken for a ride," took a new twist today, when police interviewed two Department of Justice special agents, with whom Volpe had an engagement the night before he was slain.

The agents, Calvin B. Carter and Lorain E. Gay, are credited with obtaining nine indictments in an alleged plot to force saloon keepers in Rhode Island to handle a brand of Jersey beer. Volpe is reported to have assisted them.

"SERPENT TONGUE" TARGET

MR. RICHARDSON — MRS. CALLAN

Strange telephone calls, blaming him for the trouble which led to the divorcing of Rev. John J. Callan of Wellesley by his wife, Mary Hemenway Callan, have come to John Richardson, Canton lawyer, and close friend of President Hoover.

Who Interest You and What They Are Doing

Tinted Gown for Vanderbilt Bride

Stratford, Pa., Sept. 29 (AP)—With only close relatives and a few close friends present, Miss Gladys Crosby Hopkins, daughter of Mrs. Stevens Heckscher, today became the bride of Cornelius (Sonny) Vanderbilt Whitney of New York.

"Sonny" Vanderbilt

Whitney is the son of the late Harry Payne Whitney. From his father the young man received one of America's great fortunes.

The bride introduced a recent Paris innovation by wearing a tined gown, instead of the conventional white. It was of pale lotus panne velvet, made on simple lines. It was sheathlike, close over the hips, falling in a Godet flair from the knees. The unusually long train was fan-shaped. The sleeves extended close to the wrists and the gown had a V neck.

The veil was of rose point lace, which had been worn by her grandmother. The bride's bouquet was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

All Governments Are Failures—Hitchcock

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—Former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, publisher of the Omaha World-Herald, returned from a four months' tour of Europe on the steamer Majestic today and [illegible]termed governments all over world failures. He said they were taxing the people to death. The Germans no desire for war, he said, but France is living in dread of war and, as a result, is spending great sums on armament.

G. M. Hitchcock

Hitchcock said he was startled by the gloomy, depressed attitude of the normally cheerful Germans.

Virginia Doyle Killed in Crash

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 29 (AP)—Virginia Doyle, 24, film actress employed by the Warner Brothers-First National studios, was killed early today when her automobile collided with a freight train near Cahuenga Pass.

The gentle art of short selling, establishing low and discouraging prices by "close trading" gambling among themselves, is harmful to the general public and the Stock Exchange.

If that powerful, useful and necessary institution wishes to preserve reasonable liberty of action, and not invite government control similar to that of national banks, it should regulate short selling drastically, and stick to it.

A seat on the Exchange sold yesterday for $160,000, nearly $500,000 below the price of the "happy days." That is sad for the Exchange, but regulation by the Federal government, which is very impatient just now about attacks on values and prosperity generally, would be a good deal sadder.

Mahatma Gandhi, who according to Mr. "Bugs" Baer, is showing the well dressed man what he can leave off, is idealistic and practical. If England will do what he wants, Gandhi will allow manufactured cotton goods to enter India from Lancashire only. He would trade a business monopoly for freedom, which is in keeping with modern methods. Russia trading gasoline for cattle in South America, Uncle Sam trading wheat for coffee in Brazil.

Those interested in the cement industry should know that ingenious manipulation of New York City's new building code, now planned, would prevent the use of cement bricks and blocks, without adding anything to safety. The clay brickmakers are also interested, for if they can exclude cement bricks and blocks from competition, it will be easy for them to increase the price of bricks and add to the cost of building.

TELLS OF AUTOS IN STREETS FOR HOURS

Traffic Head Offers a Long List of Questions for Hultman to Answer

Intimation that some Boston police are collecting for allowing favored automobiles to park overtime was made today by Traffic Commissioner Conry in a lengthy arraignment of Police Commissioner Hultman and the "multiplying stupidity of the police department."

It all started when Commissioner Conry was asked if he had seen the new police signal box which, it is charged, obstructs pedestrian traffic and blocks motorists' view at Washington and Court sts.

"Have I seen it?" he barked. "Have I seen it? Do you think I'm blind?"

REMINDER OF "STUPIDITY"

"It's nothing but a whipping post. It's another monument to the multiplying stupidity of the police department. It's a most hideous obstruction. It interferes with pedestrian traffic and has a reflective bearing on vehicular traffic.

"What you want to do is see Hultman and find out if he has seen it. But, on second thought, I recall that Saturday is his day off. This is probably another one of his days off, like Saturday. You'll probably find him at his home in Duxbury.

"And, while you're at it, ask him what he has to say in response to six letters that I sent to him. They are complaints from citizens and I have, thus far, been unable to get him to comment upon them.

PLENTY OF QUESTIONS

"Ask him what he has to say about 15 cars being parked in Salem st. for three-hour periods, and of others being parked there for six, seven and eight hours.

"Ask him about two machines, privately owned by policemen, being parked in Charlton st. for three and four hours. I have written him about these and he has not been interested to the extent of calling for their names.

"Ask him about cars being parked in Arlington st.—eight machines for two hours, four machines for three hours and five machines for four hours. Then, again, ask him about automobiles being parked in Brattle st. for six, seven and eight hours.

PROVINCE AND BRATTLE STS.

"I have written him that the law being violated in Brattle st. is the one that he proposed for Province st. One-hour parking is permitted on one side only. The machines that I speak of were parked on the opposite side of the street.

"How does he expect to enforce a law in Province st. when he cannot do it in Brattle st.? Let me read you the records as taken by my investigators in Brattle

City Auditor Friend, of Gloucester, Dead

Gloucester, Sept. 29—City Auditor Richard Friend, 89, a lifelong resident of Gloucester, died last night in his home, 19 Prospect st., following an acute attack of indigestion.

Before his election two years ago he was an accountant.

His widow is the only survivor.

SEA CALLS HONEYMOONERS

A few minor adjustments on their compass and other equipment are all that delay the start of J. Edward Crowley of Brookline and his bride on their honeymoon cruise across the Atlantic in their 36-foot sloop. The couple are shown on the craft at Scituate Harbor, where the adjustments are being made. (Staff photo).

INTIMIDATION OF WITNESS IS PROBED

Leona Quigley, Target of Letters, Is Party to Case Against Davidson

Threatening letters received by Miss Leona B. Quigley, Waltham beauty specialist, were turned over to Asst. Dist. Atty. William G. Andrews of Middlesex County today for use in his probe of charge that she has been intimidated.

The letters, together with other information said to include reports of threatening telephone calls, were delivered by Atty. Max Reser, counsel for Miss Quigley, in her action against Roscoe L. Davidson, Brookline real estate broker.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Andrews refused to discuss the letters. He had previously stated that if there was any evidence of an attempt to intimidate a witness he would prosecute.

ROW WITH DAVIDSON

Miss Quigley charged the threats were received since she filed a $25,000 suit against Davidson, who she claimed was responsible for her spending three days in jail on a false accusation.

Davidson charged forgery against her, but the grand jury cleared her, while indicting Davidson, who is now awaiting trial.

According to Andrews, he has been informed by police of a complaint by Miss Quigley that she has been shadowed since the indictment was returned against Davidson.

The picture of a wealthy enemy using his money and power to intimidate a woman was painted today by Miss Quigley.

"Davidson is wealthy and I am only a woman, but I am the only one that has ever fought," she said.

"I have never had a moment's rest since I filed this suit on June 26."

NOTES UNDER DOOR

Police guard was placed over her home at 303 Newton st., Waltham, last night after she reported the receipt of notes to police and told them she was afraid of being "put on the spot."

Miss Quigley told police she had found the two notes under her front door. One read:

"Get out of Waltham or before you get hurt—something is going to make you stop."

The second note was more explicit and contained a clipping from a newspaper, telling of her $25,000 action against Davidson.

On this note was the message:

"$25,000 for three days in jail —you should get life."

RECEIVED 'PHONE CALL

Miss Quigley told police she was disturbed yesterday when she received the notes but that she went as usual to her place of business in Boston. On her arrival she received a telephone call from a strange man who said to her:

"You had better stay away from that trial if you value your life."

Clothes Betray Man in Bad Check Case

Because he lacked the "front" which the average bank teller expects of a man who has $9000 to cash, George Ruewics of Waverley st., Brighton, was arrested today in the Bedford st. branch of the Atlantic National Bank.

When he presented the check for payment the teller compared it with George's clothing, which were somewhat the worse for wear. Inspector Timothy Donovan was called from police headquarters and placed him under arrest.

SHE'S SCARED OF "SPOTS"

Miss Leona B. Quigley of Waltham can tell a worried girl what to do about "spots," because she is a beauty-maker. But she doesn't want to be put on the "spot." Since her trouble with Roscoe L. Davidson, Brookline real estate man, she has been threatened, she told Waltham police today. (Staff photo.)

DRIFTING SHIP TAKEN IN TOW

New London, Ct., Sept. 29 (AP)—A Coast Guard destroyer today took in tow a small freighter in distress off Little Gull Light near the easterly entrance to Long Island Sound. The plight of the vessel was reported by telephone from the keeper of the light.

The report said the boat was drifting and flying her ensign upside down.

GIRLS ARE BACK AT RADCLIFFE

Radcliffe College was formally opened today with ceremonies at the First Congregational Church, Cambridge, faculty and student body participating.

Mary Dennison of Framingham, vice-president of the student government association, was head marshal.

DRYS GET CALL TO BATTLE

Washington, Sept. 29 (INS)—A call to Congressional drys to rally against the drive for liberalization of the Volstead act, to permit the manufacture and sale of 4 per cent beer, was issued today by Senator Arthur Capper (R.) Kansas.

Capper warned his dry colleagues that Congress may legalize 4 per cent beer and, that unless the growing movement was stopped, the 18th amendment may be subjected to amendment.

"If the Volstead act is amended by Congress so as to declare that 4 per cent beer is non-intoxicating," Senator Capper declared, "all federal control over such beer will be abandoned, as the Constitution and the law applies federal control only to intoxicating beverages. This would mean the immediate return of the saloon."

Borah Urges Silver Standard for World

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 29 (AP)—A return of world-wide prosperity, in the expressed opinion of Senator William E. Borah, is dependent in part on restoration of silver as the world's monetary standard.

A reduction of armaments and reparations, revision of the Versailles peace treaty and elimination of government bureaus also were outlined by him as necessary steps toward prosperity.

Take Tinner's Tools to Trim Ten Toes of Trekker

Copenhagen, Denmark, Sept. 29 (AP)—A story of how a member of the expedition of the late Dr. Alfred Wegener had his 10 toes amputated in midwinter on the Greenland ice cap came to light today.

Dr. Johannes Georgi, German scientist, said he and Dr. Ernst Sorge—neither of them surgeons—operated on Dr. Fritz Loewe, whose toes had been frostbitten on a trek from the coast to the central camp.

They used a pair of tin-cutting shears and a small pocket knife in weather that was many degrees below zero. The operation took 90 minutes. Dr. Loewe was said to have borne up with fortitude.

3 Killed in Wreck of Passenger Train

Ashkum, Ill. Sept. 29—Three persons were killed last night when an Illinois Central local passenger train was derailed near here. Three passenger coaches, the baggage car and the locomotive overturned. Cause of the wreck was not determined.

The dead were Henry Foggarty, Chicago, engineer; Charles Nolan, the fireman, and an unidentified Negro riding on the baggage car.

NEWLYWEDS TO SAIL ATLANTIC

J. Edward Crowley of Brookline and his bride will sail out of Scituate harbor today for Bermuda, the start of their honeymoon cruise across the Atlantic in their 36-foot cruiser, the Ochito.

The couple pulled into Scituate harbor after setting out from Gloucester yesterday. They said a few minor adjustments to equipment and several purchases must be made before they left on the cruise.

Crowley came to Boston early today to make the purchases while adjustments were being made aboard the craft.

HINTS AT FIFTH TORCH MURDER

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 29 (AP)—Hints of another torch murder in Washtenaw County today came to the attention of a one man grand jury investigating the activities of Catherine Keller, sweetheart of Fred Smith, one of three slayers now serving life sentences for the killing and burning of two young couples near here Aug. 11.

The information came to the prosecutor's office 10 days ago in a letter from David L. Blackstone, Negro, one of the torch slayers.

Blackstone wrote that he had information from Smith "about another torch murder." State officials planned to go to Marquette branch prison to question him.

WENDEL WILL FRAUD CHARGED

New York, Sept. 29 (INS)—A battle for one of America's great est private fortunes—$75,000,000 estate of Ella von E. Wendel—was in full swing here today.

Attorneys for Miss Rosa Drew Stansbury, 74-year-old next of kin, filed suit in federal court charging fraud, conspiracy and undue influence by two of Miss Wendel's executors, Atty. Charles G. Koss and his daughter, Isabella G. Koss.

Judge Mack granted a temporary injunction delaying probate of the will and set Friday for hearing.

GIRL 3, VICTIM OF PARALYSIS

Worcester, Sept. 29—Ethel Benoit, three, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Benoit of Grafton, died at the City Hospital early today, the fourth victim of infantile paralysis in this section this year.

The girl was taken to the hospital Saturday night, but failed to improve. Late last night her condition changed for the worse and she sank rapidly.

OFFICER FIRES WRONG WAY

New York, Sept. 29 (INS)—A policeman shot and wounded himself today during a clash between police and the 2500 employes of the Loft Candy Co., who went on strike because of an increase in working hours without a corresponding increase in pay.

The strikers had gathered in a vacant lot to hear addresses.

Four policemen on duty stood with their backs to the wall of the factory and with drawn guns ordered the strikers to disperse. It was at this point that Patrolman Edmund Church met with the accident. His gun went off, the bullet going through his index finger.

CAUGHT IN DARK BEHIND CURTAIN

Worcester, Sept. 29—Douglas G. M. Stuart, a teacher of the violin, admitted in superior court here today that he shared a home with Mrs. Florence C. Stewart, wife of William L. Stewart, and the two Stewart children.

But, he declared, there was "nothing wrong" in the arrangement.

His admission came after a detective, testifying in an alienation of affections suit for $10,000 filed by William against Douglas, told of finding Douglas in Mrs. Stewart's home after the lights were out at night.

"This man Stuart," said William, "used to come to my house in the afternoon while I was away, and stay two or three hours. He was only engaged to give our two boys lessons of a half hour each. Finally I couldn't stand it, and left."

After that he declared, he engaged J. Leo Mulcahy, a private detective. He testified that one night William and Mulcahy went to Williams' home, watched Douglas enter and waited until the lights went out at 10:30.

Then, Mulcahy said, they called police, burst into the house and found Douglas hiding behind a curtain.

Douglas, who conducted his own defense, told the jurors:

"It would be silly to find a verdict against me. You can't collect any money from me, because I haven't any."

FISHERMEN CUP RACE OCT. 17

Gloucester, Sept. 29 (AP)—The Gloucester schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, challenger for the International Fishermen's Trophy, now held by Bluenose of Lunenburg, N. S., will engage the schooner Elsie in a series of three races off Gloucester before leaving for Halifax, it was announced today.

The Elsie-Thebaud series will be sailed Oct. 9, 10 and 11, and on the following day Thebaud will leave for Halifax for her contest with Bluenose, which will open Oct. 17.

IRENE CASTLE IN LACE? NO, OVERALLS!

She Wouldn't Even Call on Dogs in a Yellow Costume, Much Less Schroeder's Pigs!

Chicago, Sept. 29—Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin did not wear a yellow lace beach costume and yellow knit slippers when she visited the pigsty of William Schroeder, Wheeling (Ill.) farmer, whom she accused of being cruel to his pigs.

This was brought out during hearing of Schroeder's appeal from a $10 fine assessed on Mrs. McLaughlin's complaint that Shroeder didn't do right by his pigs.

"I wouldn't wear a costume like that to a dog fight, not that I approve of dog fights," the North Shore society woman and champion of friendless animals said in response to a question from Schroeder's attorney as to the kind of clothes she wore when she made her investigation of Schroeder's pigs. In fact, she wore overalls.

Schroeder denied his pigs got anything but the best of treatment. He described the food he gave them and said it would tempt the "most jaded pig appetite you ever saw."

IRENE CASTLE McLAUGHLIN

"What else did you feed them?" asked Mrs. McLaughlin's lawyer.

"Minerals," he replied.

"Are tin cans minerals?" interposed Mrs. McLaughlin. "The pen was littered with them."

"Those," said Schroeder, "were buttercups."

Mrs. McLaughlin, known as "society's best dressed woman," heard defense counsel refer to her as "that woman of unscrupulous character."

Atty. R. H. Miller, representing Schroeder, devoted his argument largely to an attack on Mrs. McLaughlin.

Atty. Miller admitted that Mrs. McLaughlin's story that there was a foot and a half of slime in the sty was "more or less corroborated by some of her witnesses, but none of them dared to lie as she did."

Mrs. McLaughlin, in a dazzling brown and yellow ensemble topped by an Empress Eugenie hat, reddened in anger under the lawyer's attack.

Judge John Prystalski indicated there are cases he'd rather hear than the McLaughlin-Schroder feud. A jury is to decide Schroeder's fate. The worst punishment he can receive is $200 fine.

Swine Fed Tempting Dishes Anyhow, and Even Given Tin Buttercups!

M'DONALD TOLD TO 'CARRY ON'

London, Sept. 29 (AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald called at Buckingham Palace early this afternoon to seek the views of the King as to whether Parliament should be dissolved and a general election called.

It is believed the King told him to carry on the National government at any cost during the financial crisis.

This is Mr. MacDonald's own desire.

The prime minister has said he would tell the House of Commons tomorrow what he is going to do. If there is to be an immediate election, Parliament will be dissolved, and the polling will be announced for late next month. If there is not to be an election, Parliament probably will be adjourned until early spring.

Fidac Head Urges Closer Relations

New Haven, Sept. 29—Maj. Edward L. White of this city, newly elected president of Fidac, said he hoped to bring about an early conference for closer relations between the allied war veterans and veterans of the Central Powers' armies.

EX-EMPRESS SHOULD "LIKE BEATINGS"

Her Brother Says So as She Threatens to Sue "Mr. Pu Yi" for a Divorce

Tientsin, China, Sept. 29 (AP)—The domestic affairs of China's former Emperor, Hsuan Tung, who has lived in retirement here as "Mr. Henry Pu Yi" since his ejection from Peiping in 1924, are receiving considerable publicity due to the threat of his second wife to sue for divorce on the ground of ill-treatment.

Sou Fei, daughter of a Manchu noble, went into the imperial household nine years ago at the age of 16, and later was married to the "Boy Emperor."

Recently, on the pretext of a shopping expedition, she walked out of his residence in the Japanese concession, and, eluding escorts, fled to the home of a relative.

SHE PREFERS SUICIDE.

She sent a letter to her husband announcing she would apply for a divorce. Suicide was preferable, she said, to existence in a household where she was so badly used.

Adherents of the former ruler grew indignant at her action which they regard as an affront to the Manchu royal family. The Chinese papers have published a letter from the girl's brother, a staunch monarchist, bitterly condemning his sister for her disobedience and the law.

"MR. HENRY PU YI"

Wife Who Fled Palace by Ruse Says She Prefers Death to Ex-Chinese Ruler demanding that she return to her husband.

"The former emperor has never ill-treated you," the letter says, "and, even if he did, you should enjoy it, for it is your fate and can end only with death. If you are separated from him, your reputation will be ruined, and in this world there will be no place for you."

HE'S ABOVE THE LAW

Sou Fei and her supporters remain firm in demanding a separation, and a divorce action is threatened unless a friendly settlement is reached. In the event of the case coming before the courts, the point would have to be decided as to whether suit could be legally brought against the ex-emperor.

By the agreement under which the Manchus abdicated in 1912 it was stipulated that the emperor should retain his title and receive the respect accorded to a foreign sovereign.

Successive Chinese governments have ignored the compact, but the Manchus claim it still remains in force, placing Hsuan Tung above

MELCHETT FOR TARIFF WALL

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

London, Sept. 29—Even though it means denouncing trade treaties, Great Britain must reduce imports and restore the balance of trade, Lord Melchett said today.

He is to introduce in the House of Lords tomorrow a bill empowering the King to restrict imports and decree tariffs by orders in council as an alternative to a general election, which he said would be "calamitous" at this time.

"For every million pounds sterling worth of goods we export, Britain imports 2,000,000 pounds," Lord Melchett declared. "We have no longer the gold nor the goods to meet this deficit, therefore we must reduce imports or else get further into debt.

"The United States and others had free use of our markets for many years. We are entitled to retaliate now when our fortune is at stake."

20 MILLIONS IN GOLD GOES TO EUROPE

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—Approximately $20,000,000 in gold, the largest shipment to leave the United States in a single day in more than two years, went on an ocean voyage today, bound for Switzerland and France.

Withdrawn yesterday from the New York Federal Reserve Bank by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, it was locked in the great vaults of two of the fastest liners plying the Atlantic, the Europa and the Aquitania. Speed is essential because of the loss of interest on the gold while in transit. Both sail today.

The largest portion of the day's shipment goes to France which has a gold supply second only to the United States. The Guaranty Trust Co. announced that the Aquitania was carrying $12,000,000 in gold, of which $7,000,000 is for France, and the rest for Switzerland.

KISS STARTS LILLIAN FOSTER PAY ROW

Ousted Stage Star Demands Salary Be Kept Up While Play Runs

By JOSEPH COWEN

New York, Sept. 29.—Lillian Foster sprawled on the stage, flat on her tummy, with a stool in the middle of her back. When Reginald Mason kisses them they stay kissed.

The audience roared at Lillian's discomfiture. The British actress had never been so humiliated in her life.

Back of the curtain Reginald, Lillian's leading man in "Divorce Me, Dear," apologized. He had meant to drop her gently on the stool, as he was supposed to do after kissing her, but his foot or something had slipped.

ONCE CHASTISED CRITIC

Lillian, with admirable restraint, controlled herself. You'll recall the time she snuffed Heaven Sweffler, the English dramatic critic, over there in dear old Lou'non just because he wrote that he didn't like her voice.

LILLIAN FOSTER

Certainly there can't be anything wrong with Lillian's kisses. They're the finest brand of British sweets ever imported to Broadway.

Osculatory Mishap Is a Sequence to Her Trouble With Critic

Now Lillian may have fallen for Mason that time, but she's a long way from being a falling star. Sidney M. Biddell, the producer, learned that when the play reached Boston.

Despite his contract to star her, he didn't have her name up in the lights at all. And on the billing he had crowded it into type you could hardly see.

When she demanded an explanation, Biddell discharged her. Then he preferred charges against her to Actors' Equity.

Lillian gave her side of the story today as her attorney Harry H. Oshrin of 1501 Broadway, sent a request to Equity for immediate trial. She intends to hold Biddell to his contract, and compel him to pay her the star's salary for the run of the play.

But she'll never sing "Kiss Me Again" to Reg Mason.

MRS. COLLINGS IS TO SEEK REST WITH KIN HERE

By JAMES J. SMITH

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Broken in spirit and body by the tragedy which robbed her of a devoted husband and shadowed her with suspicion, Mrs. Lillian C. Collings will come back to Boston, home of her girlhood, to seek solace and obscurity.

Her intention was made known to the Boston Evening American today at the Dorchester home of her father, Dr. Herman P. Chelius, retired director of the Boston Conservatory of Music.

DELAYED BY INQUEST

Only the coroner's inquest into the mystery of Long Island Sound is delaying her return. This preceding, characterized as a "Roman Holiday" by the young widow's attorneys, was postponed to Friday following her collapse on the witness stand.

At the home of her father-in-law in Stamford, Ct., Mrs. Collings is gathering her strength for what may be the final test of her story of the midnight murder of Benjamin B. Collings.

Already she has repeated the story 11 times in all its ghastly detail. And over the objection of her attorney, Judge William A. Kelly, she was forced to undergo a partial cross-examination at the inquest by Dist.-Atty. Alexander Blue of Suffolk County.

WARNING BY COUNSEL

At the height of the grilling Mrs. Collings, haggard and worn by the ordeal of almost constant repetition, collapsed. Judge Kelly thereupon gave word to the authorities that the widow would not submit to further questioning unless the "spectacle" of the opening session was abolished.

Preparations were under way at her father's home today to welcome her back there with her six-year-old daughter, Barbara. Her two aunts, Misses Rose and Anna Chelius, told a reporter that Mrs. Collings' father had returned to Stamford to be at her side.

Old pupils of the aged music master found him broken in health when he returned to Boston several days ago after a week spent in comforting his daughter.

Today flowers and messages were received at the Chelius home from friends all over New England.

Miss Rose Chelius said she feared the strain would prove too great for her brother and that he might not survive the ordeal which he has shared with his only child.

CHELIUS HEART BROKEN

"He has aged terribly in the few days since this misfortune," she said. "He is so old—past 76—and Lillian and Ben and the baby meant so much to him.

"The crime alone would have been enough to break his heart but the knowledge that Lillian, whom he loved so much, was under suspicion has made him weep almost constantly and like a child.

"That poor girl, of all people, to be pointed at and persecuted by almost everyone. It's hard to think that such things could happen to her. She was so quiet, so kind, even as a child.

"And she was so happy with her husband and the baby. Satisfied to live only for them. On the boat—away from everyone, I suppose people wondered why they lived that way. It is hard, probably, for people in this age to imagine that a young couple could be happy in only each other's company."

Republic Steel Also Slashes Pay

Youngstown, O., Sept. 29 (AP)—Republic Steel Corporation will put into effect a reduction of wages October 1 "commensurate with the reduction already announced" by other large steel companies, it was announced today by T. M. Girdler, chairman of the board.

A. F. L. May Vote for Better Beer

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 29 (INS)—The American Federation of Labor, in national convention next week at Vancouver, B. C., will probably adopt a resolution calling for the legalization of 2¾ per cent beer, President William Green said today.

BODY WASHED UP COLLINGS CLUE

gazed at the picture for several minutes. Then she said:

"He seems to be a trifle shorter than the man on the boat, but his nose, his head, his general features, his whole type are very familiar. I am almost certain it is the man."

Her identification of the son's picture was more rapid. She just glanced momentarily at the face and said:

"His picture certainly runs true to form of the features and the coloring of the boy on the boat."

By "coloring" she referred to the swarthy countenance of the youth in th picture. Judge William A. Kelly, her attorney was present Mrs. Collings viewed the photographs.

According to relatives of the veterinarian, he and his son are inseparable, and the boy is completely under the influence of the man. The relatives even said that he would probably kill at his father's bidding.

Father and son are reported to be on an auto trip with relatives in two motor cars. Tourist houses and overnight camps will be searched along the chief highways between Connecticut and Florida.

The doctor, a morphine addict, is reported to have been leading a nomadic life along the sound, spending much of his time digging clams and catching eels.

It was recalled that the slain yachtsman asked one of the men, "aren't you a clamdigger?" It is believed Collings may have recognized the elder man as one he had seen along the shore.

SECOND BODY FOUND.

According to other information, the doctor quarreled with a fisherman several weeks ago and hit him with a milk bottle. Collings was struck with a similar weapon, before he was trussed up and cast into the water.

The finding today of another body on the Long Island shore, tossed up by the tide in the same way that Collings' body was carried ashore a week after the murder, led Suffolk County authorities to investigate to determine if there is any link with the Collings mystery.

The body found today is that of a man about 45 years old. It was discovered at Eaton's Neck, near which the Penguin was anchored on Sept. 8, the night of the murder.

The man weighed 165 pounds, was 5 feet, 8 inches tall, wore blue overalls, a blue shirt and a leather belt on which a buckle bore the initial 'S.'

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick J. Munder, one of the authorities investigating the murder, assigned several deputy sheriffs to make a careful examination of the body with a view to comparing its description with that of the older of the two men described by Mrs. Collings.

The body was found on Asharoken beach shortly before dawn, by Wilfert Bonneau, a milk wagon driver.

If the body is not that of the elder "pirate," it may be that of the second swimmer, who was heard near the Collings cruiser on the night of the murder, it was thought today.

PLAN AN AUTOPSY.

N. L. Noteman, the yachtsman who rescued 5-year-old Barbara Collings, told the authorities that he had heard a swimmer who probably could not have been Collings apparently drown some distance from the Penguin on the night of the attack.

A preliminary examination indicated that the body had been in the water about three weeks. It was three weeks ago tomorrow night that the mysterious attack on the Penguin took place.

Under the right ear was a hole which it was believed might prove to be a bullet wound.

An autopsy on the body was to be performed late today by Dr. Vincent McAuliffe.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze, who performed the autopsy on Collings' body and refused to divulge the complete findings at the inquest, is confined to his home here, having suffered a nervous collapse.

Detective Felix diMartini today went to Bridgeport, Ct., to question Fred J. Voos, president of the Bridgeport Eastern League baseball club, concerning blankets and tennis shoes reported stolen from his yacht.

Tennis shoes were being worn by Mrs. Collings when she was found adrift after the slaying.

Di Martini also questioned Gustave R. Tesch, brother-in-law of the baseball club head, and Elmer J. Holmes, his son-in-law, about the articles.

NOT WITHIN MY MEMORY HAVE THE POST-DEBUTANTES shown such a practical urge as they are doing this season. Is it because they are really serious-minded, or is it the year after so like the morning after disillusionment and a headache?

MARY EMERY

We have heard several of the girls who have come out bewail the fact that there are few parties, balls and dances where the post-debbie can meet her own group or members of other groups for social intercourse. "Of course," this sweet young thing said, "we don't expect to get RUSHED after our coming-out year, but it would be nice to meet men a little older to whom one could really talk about interesting things, and dance and just have a good time for the evening."

* * *

We know just what she means and it is not only among the socially prominent that this lack of community spirit exists. There should be dances, parties, assemblies, where young people of every age mingle and exchange ideas, ideals and dance steps, with no thought beyond having a fine time for that occasion. And we feel that at such affairs no introductions should be necessary if they are properly sponsored. The fact that a young maiden or young man attends a nice party should vouch for their reliability and—let there be no crashing at the gate. Promiscuous guest lists are fundamentally the same as public dance halls.

Difficult Time for the Young People

WE KNOW OF ONE BOY WHO HAS BEEN IN THE care of doctors and tutors for years until at last he is in Harvard and he has been deluged with invitations by doting mothers. It will be a pity if a nice little deb should marry him in a rash moment, if he were foolish enough to propose it, and be sorry ever afterward.

* * *

BETWEEN THE MARRIAGE question and the money question, the young people must be having a tough time of it, and what are the adults doing about it? Trying to solve their own domestic and financial problems probably, but wouldn't it be saner to try and make things safer and happier for the young people, try and abolish the gold standard in the social world and perhaps some of our own questions might get answered.

AMONG THE BRIGHT young things who are going to WORK, we are sorry to hear Emery, who came out last year, and is assisting Miss Rachel Warner as secretary of the Junior League. Miss Emery was the pretty girl who broke her ankle at the Hotel-Dolphin skating party last fall and was in a plaster cast so long it prevented her touring Europe this summer as she had planned.

JEANNE SARGEANT DAUGHTER of the Cyrus Sargeants of Cambridge, will join Miss Mabel Bell, young daughter of the Stoughton Bells of that same city, at Amy Sacker's School for Interior Decorating. Alice Means has been serving her apprenticeship in that line on the HILL and we hear that her engagement, which has been rumored and denied several times is really TRUE but that it will not be announced until HE is out of college. We approve!

Jeanne Sargeant

HELEN MACOMBER, FROM out Framingham way, will study Art with a capital A and Frances Gardiner and Patsy (Harriet) Fuller, who has just returned from a long trip to the North Cape and then further journeyings into Italy and southern France, will take up special courses in history of art and English literature. We could suggest other things that they might do better.

Debut Planned

BARBARA RICHARDSON will again assist Mrs. Horace Morison at the Mori Sport Shop in Brookline. Mrs. Morison is bringing out another attractive daughter this season, Miss Babbette, and already several informal parties have been held for her at their summer home at Peterboro, N. H.

BARBARA HOLDSWORTH, another deb of last season, is going to do settlement work at Trinity House. Why, oh, why do they do it? It takes years and years of living and experiencing to understand Settlement work how we hate the work. As one Vine Club singer once remarked after singing Irish and Negro ballads until she was hoarse, "The poor patients looked bored to death. I don't blame them." Showing she had penetration and a sense of humor. We had already felt like suggesting that they sing "My Wild Irish Rose" or "The Sidewalks of New York."

* * *

MRS. BOYLSTON BEAL and her daughter, Mrs. Katherine Schuyler Choate of Topsfield, are sailing Thursday on the Ile de France for Europe. They will travel through Germany, Belgium, Holland and France, mostly by airplane.

* * *

DASHING ALONG IN HER snappy roadster today, we glimpsed Virginia Rice, visor and all, evidently either starting or finishing a match. She was one of the entrants at the tennis matches at Essex.

HOME FROM TRIP ABROAD

MISS VANCE MISS DE NORMANDIE

POST-DEBS—and cousins—Miss Mary Vance, a debutante of two seasons ago, is shown with Miss Ellen De Normandie. They have been abroad all summer, making a motor trip through England, and are now back to start work again, Miss Vance as head of the volunteers at the Children's Hospital, and Miss De Normandie at the Junior League.

Ceremony Will Take Place in Church

Saturday, October 17, is the date set by Miss Betty Bird and Mr. William O. Clark for their wedding in St. John's Church, Framingham. Officiating at the 4 o'clock ceremony will be Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, and Miss Bird will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. Reginald W. Bird. A reception will follow at their estate, Waveney Farm, also in Framingham.

Miss Bird has chosen her younger sister, Miss Patricia Bird, as her maid of honor, and the six bridesmaids include Miss Anna Clark, a sister of the bridegroom-elect; Miss Barbara Frost, of Framingham and Chestnut Hill; Miss Dorothy Preston, Miss Margaret Emerson of Boston, Miss Cynthia Waters of Brookline and Mrs. Frank Rogers Bacon, Jr., of Milwaukee, the former Miss Elizabeth Denham of Framingham.

Miss Bird came out in October of the 1929-30 season, at an unusually beautiful dance at Waveney Farm, at which she shared the honors with Miss Clark. She became a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club the same year.

Mr. Alexander H. Ladd, Jr., is to be Mr. Clark's best man, the group of ushers including his brother, Mr. Elton Clark, Jr.; Miss Bird's brother, Mr. John R. Bird; Mr. Nelson Cabot and Mr. John E. Paine, Jr., of Milton, Mr. Winthrop Churchill of Weston and Mr. Everett Morse, Jr., of Chestnut Hill.

Mr. Clark, who is the son of Mr. Elton Clark, of Kilima, Framingham, was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1925. He is a member of the Delphic, Hasty Pudding, and Tennis and Racket clubs. After their wedding trip, he will probably bring his bride back to Framingham, or that vicinity, to live.

Richard Child Weds Again

Newport, R. I., Sept. 29—Richard Washburn Child, author and former ambassador to Italy, was married last night to Mrs. Dorothy Everson, who has served his family as governess and secretary, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gallagher, North Thames st.

Judge Hugh B. Baker of the Rhode Island superior court performed the ceremony in the presence of a small group of friends of the immediate family. Mrs. Frederick Clifford was matron of honor and Joseph M. Gallagher, a brother of the bride, was best man.

Mrs. Everson is Mr. Child's fourth wife. Their engagement was announced Sept. 6, but it was not known until shortly before the wedding that they were to be married last night. Mr. Child obtained the marriage license from the city clerk several days ago.

After an automobile trip Mr. and Mrs. Child will return to the Child home on Greenough place here.

Fall Dresses for Street Wear

Out of the summer regalia—into winter clothes. The transition stage is something to be pondered over.

The first fall street dress always carries a thrill with it. It gives one such a new and fresh feeling. It has to be a bit warmer than the things one has been wearing and the clever new wools are delightfully right for street wear now, and to snuggle under a coat later on.

They are amazingly different, these new woolens, both as to materials and their fashioning. Interesting weaves, feather-weight, yet warm, fashioned softly, subtly and with more of dash and verve than we ever expected of our day by day dresses.

"Restrained quaintness, tailored, yet demure, and in perfect taste," sums up the fascinating wool frock pictured. Tallyho green and white, a knit mixture, sheer and spongy, describes the material. Inserted godets at skirt edge give a continuous and animated ripple. Ruffle edging V neck and sleeve finish from wrists are miniature circular godets echoing the skirt flare. Deep bias sections front and back mould the hips, that in front terminating in tie sash and buttery bow, giving the merest hint of a bustle.

So many of the first fall dresses are predominatingly green, and green is lovely in the new knitted things. Brown is frequently used as an accenting note, that is, the shoes, handbag, gloves and sometimes the trimmings of the dress will be brown. Brown is a better color in this respect than black and besides it makes a much smarter combination.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

Junior League Officers Are Kept Busy

In the Junior League at luncheon the other day we saw more of people all just returned from the North and South Shores or a summer abroad, everyone looking very smart in tweeds or thin wool ensembles, and the Eugenies very much to the fore.

Miss Elizabeth Wells looked exceptionally chic in a very plaid, plaid skirt and navy jacket, topped by a creation (it couldn't possibly be called just a hat), of navy felt with blue, green and red feathers set along the sides, points to the front. She was accompanied by an old school, (Westover), friend from New York, and we heard lots about a summer on the Cape.

Office Opened

Miss Alice Dalton and Miss Elizabeth Seaife, as usual, the merriest of the merry, were sitting at a large table in the middle of the lunchroom, where every one could hear their amusing conversation. Miss Dorothy Lawrence joined them for a few minutes, but as president of the League, the demands on her time are many.

The office was officially opened for work yesterday, and down there we found several of last years debs right on the job. Mary Emery is assisting Rachel Warner, the League secretary, Francis Gardiner is helping Miss Barbara Reynolds with the social service work, and Anne Donaldson, who has just gotten back from a summer in England, seems to be giving a helping hand to anyone who needs it. Helen Jackson is back at her old job on the telephone, and Anne Clifford and Helen Moseley are hard at work in the different branches of the many activities.

To Live in New York

We got a glimpse of Edith Parker, that clever lady of the "boards," who has saved the day for so many League and Vincent Club shows, besides doing excellent work on the legitimate stage.

Oh, that reminds us, speaking of Alice Dalton and acting, she told us that she is off to New York tomorrow for some work in that line, and will live there this winter, as her sister, Marion, is doing, though Marion's work is quite different—training for a nurse at the Presbyterian Hospital. Clever people, those Daltons!

Americans at Biarritz Fetes

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Biarritz, Sept. 29—Night life at this famous resort is now at its highest pitch. One of the smartest gala dinners at the Palais attracted more than 450 guests.

Among those attending was Lady Alexander Metcalfe, who looked well in a black moire evening gown with a tight bodice and a long full skirt.

Lady Furness, the former Thelma Morgan, of New York, wore a printed chiffon in beige and red with a red velvet wrap trimmed at the collar in white fox.

Another brilliant gala was that given at the Cibour Yacht Club. All the most important colonies were represented; American by Roy MacWilliams, wealthy Chicagoan; British by Capt. Philip Ashworth, aide to the Duke of Connaught; Spanish by the Duke and Duchess De Seylan, and the French by Count and Countess De Bagneaux.

Mrs. O'Malley Keyes wore green chiffon with a matching scarf edged with fox, while Miss Jane O'Malley Keyes was in white satin with a crimson scarf. Mrs. Roy MacWilliams was also in white, but she wore an evening cape of black velvet with an ermine collar.

Mrs. Dorothy Gibson Brulatour was in black satin crepe, the skirt widening in volants. Miss Olivia Thompson wore an electric green gown with the skirt bouffant starting from an even waistline.

No Nuptials for Lili

Santa Barbara, Cal., Sept. 29—Reports that Lili Damita, film actress, was married or considering matrimony brought out a denial from the player here.

Olga Osterhout Bride Oct. 10

Miss Olga Osterhout and Mr. Harold Bright Sears, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Sears of Chestnut Hill, will be married at 4 o'clock on Monday, Oct. 12, in St. John's memorial chapel, Cambridge.

The engagement was announced by Miss Osterhout's mother, Mrs. Winthrop J. V. Osterhout, last April.

Miss Osterhout, who attended Smith College before taking art courses in New York and Paris is the daughter of Dr. W. J. V. Osterhout of the Rockefeller Institute of New York.

Mr. Sears is a Harvard graduate, class of 1926.

Boston Man Is Wed Abroad

Miss Elizabeth Neill Leffingwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmore Leffingwell of New York, and Mr. Curtis Winfield Childs, son of Mr. Fred Lincoln Childs of Boston, were married yesterday in St. Paul's church, London, according to word received by relatives here.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at a London hotel, after which the bride and bridegroom left for the Riviera. They will be at home after Oct. 15 in Paris for a time, later coming to Boston to reside.

Mr. Childs is a graduate of Harvard, and spent two years in travel around the world at the conclusion of his college career.

His bride was born in San Francisco, and received her schooling in California, New York and Paris.

"NO MORE PARADES," SAYS INNOCENT BYSTANDER

By GILBERT SELDES

I WOULD LIKE TO KNOW more about the parade of the American Legionnaires in Detroit last week. The descriptions I have read and the pictures I have seen do not account for the 200,000 direct and indirect victims of the show—men, women and children of a great metropolis who had sunstroke and hysterics, or were trampled and pushed about when aid was given to those who had succumbed to the sun and to their own emotions. Detroit, as I remember it, is a bright and thoroughly urban city, and not likely to excite itself nearly to the point of mania over ordinary gatherings. And parades, as I remember them, are nothing to get excited about at all.

Gilbert Seldes

Unseen Parades Are Best

I suppose the greatest parade of our time was the impromptu march which celebrated Armistice Day in Paris, in 1918, movie and eye-witness reports give it the rarest of all combinations—excitement and grandeur, to which were added pathos and humor, kindliness and carelessness, intoxication and religious ecstasy. As I spent the day trying to collect a bet on the armistice from a lieutenant and as the lieutenant, for the first time in months, insisted that I salute him whenever I spoke, I saw no celebration of any kind that day; I fancy that the outbreak in New York was matched in many other cities.

The kind of parades I remember with acute dislike are those put on by fraternal orders (against which, otherwise, I have nothing in the world). I also dislike baby parades, if they are at all like the sound-picture records I have seen of them; and generally I dislike all parades which break up traffic and make me late for trains. I am aware that they satisfy an eternal instinct for dressing up and that they are the American counterparts of religious rituals and nature-rites; I have read the psychologists and am humble. But I don't like them.

At the Age of 8

It may be the fault of an exceptional memory. The first of these parades I ever saw was held in Philadelphia on a broiling Summer's day and we were allowed to go early. That was a mistake to begin with, for the first three hours of the parade were spent in humiliation, fear, resentment, crying and quarrels; it seemed certain that other people would squeeze us out of our places; that the rope would sag and the mounted cops would drive us, and no one but us, away; that the line of march had been changed to turn off just a block (or as we said there, a square) away from where we stood. The second, and more elaborate mistake was the parade itself. It wasn't funny and it wasn't impressive and the people on the floats looked only a shade less dilapidated than the people on foot. When it was all over we ran home and ate ice cream.

The mysteries of parading are many. What makes people want to parade and what makes others willing to go through excessive discomfort in order to watch them? Why are parades so long and slow and why are the floats so unentertaining?

I suspect that the fear of missing something sends a number of spectators to the sidewalks. It would be dreadful to miss a parade and know, with remorseless certainty, that someone was going to describe the whole thing to you afterward. Better suffer it at once and be able to say, "I was there."

The Souvenir Snatchers

Somehow this connects itself in my mind with the people who not only wrote their names on the DO-X, but began to dismember the whole of it for souvenirs. What becomes of the souvenir hunters and how long does their satisfaction in any one treasure stay with them? (Mr. Nunnally Johnson has written an amusing story, in "There Ought to Be a Law," on this theme.) What became of the man who sat up all night to buy the first ticket on the subway? What becomes of all the boys and girls who get autographs? (Edward Bok is the only non-professional autograph collector known for any other reason.) Is there any follow-up on the baseball autographed by Babe Ruth or are they and their owners all forgotten? Joe Cook, the good comedian, has a glass case on the wall of his play room, enclosing the only baseball not autographed by Babe Ruth; what has happened to those that were? And what do paraders do when they are let off parading?

A favorite quotation of William James was, "There will be news in Heaven," and the sceptical George Santayana remarked that this might indeed be so, but under the sun there is nothing new. Yet old things come back to us with all the effect of freshness, and I was pleased to read the other day that mothers (and even fathers) may, in certain circumstances, pick up, go to, and otherwise soothe a crying child without irretrievably distorting the child's psychology and otherwise ruining its life. Fifteen years ago it was not only old-fashioned, it was positively wrong, to pacify a crying baby.

The new theory is that the infant, crying with or without reason, may work up such a grudge at the end of half an hour that he will forever after dislike his parents. The crafty babe knows that these parents are within earshot; indeed, he or she cries only to annoy, to attract attention, to establish him, her, or itself as the center of human society. Until now we have been told that this desire should not be gratified; that the young must learn to do without their elders. It was a charming theory, because it allowed parents to go to the movies.

More Coming, Perhaps

The breakdown in this system is, perhaps, the thin side of the wedge. I ask myself with curiosity about the future, whether psychologists of ten years hence will not come forward in defense of a good-natured slap; not a brutal blow, you understand, but slapping down. And—dreadful thought for parents who have gone through the serious business of letting their children develop without discipline—will they change front again and assure us that a little rigidity is necessary, that children ought not to be allowed to develop their personalities at all costs? Will there be a bear market in personality altogether?

These are not playful speculations. Can you imagine the resentment of a father or mother who has suffered infinite restraint, following out the present theory, and then discovers that it was useless, that a slap in time might have done the child good—as well as the parent? Will they take their anger out in a knockdown battle with grownup offspring? Or will they shrug their shoulders and merely hope for the best?

QUINN AMAZES HIS DOCTORS

Although amazing the attending physician by his vitality, ex-Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge was close to death today in his home, Fresh Pond parkway, Cambridge, with the family remaining close by the bedside.

Dr. William Noonan, the family physician, also remained in the Quinn home.

Throughout the night, the former mayor alternated between unconsciousness and semi-consciousness, but recognized nobody.

During the night, a visit to the stricken house was paid by Mayor and Mrs. Richard Russell.

Last rites of the Catholic church were administered to Mr. Quinn yesterday by the Rev. John F. Sullivan, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Cambridge.

CALLAN BLAMES LAWYER

case is tentatively scheduled for argument on a bill of exceptions before the Supreme Court in December.

The attacks on Richardson, accusing him and other members of Miss Callan's family of being responsible for the divorce, have extended over a period of six weeks.

Many of them took the form of midnight and early morning telephone calls to Richardson's Canton home. The lawyer's slumber was so broken up that finally, on retiring, he disconnected his phone.

Richardson's Canton home is near that where Mrs. Callan now resides. During the trial of her divorce he was a daily observer. Her counsel of record was Edward J. McLennen.

Rev. Callan, since the divorce has continued to reside in Wellesley, where he was rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church. He was accused by Mrs. Callan of cruel and abusive treatment and intoxication and much of the testimony at hearing of the suit concerned his actions after he had been drinking.

A phone call, similar in nature to those received by Richardson, was received recently by Mrs. Natalie Hemenway, of Milton, sister-in-law of Mrs. Callan.

Mrs. Hemenway and Mrs. Hetty Richard, of New York, sister of Mrs. Callan, during the divorce trial were served with notices of $100,000 suits by Callan alleging they alienated the affections of his wife.

Callan, at Wellesley, said that he planned to petition Norfolk probate court for a modification of the decree granting Mrs. Callan custody of their three minor children.

He said his action follows a series of stormy overtures which terminated last Sunday in his seeking the aid of Wellesley police while his children were visiting him.

A nursemaid employed by his divorced wife attempted to force her way into his home, he said, but was prevented from doing so by Sergt. David Gallery, who answered his call for police assistance.

SPIED ON, CALLAN SAYS

"I have been compelled to assert my legal and paternal rights because in my efforts to see my children I have been subjected to espionage, insult, offense, humiliation and actual violence," Callan charged.

He said he had been compelled to see his children at public beaches and that last Sunday the nursemaid and a "strange man" accompanied the three children from their mother's to his home.

The man, Callan said, was William Thornhill, a policeman, who had been sent to "protect the children."

William Thornhill, a Taunton policeman, today displayed a written authority from Mrs. Callan authorizing him and persons with him to enter her Wellesley home, "now occupied by John J. Callan."

Ethel Nelson Better

Ethel May Nelson, vaudeville comedienne, who was brought to City Hospital Sunday, suffering from an overdose of an hypnotic drug, was reported as greatly improved today.

NEWTON WOMAN SUICIDE IN POND

Miss Elizabeth Tappan, 78, wealthy resident of Bowen st., Newton Center, committed suicide today in Waterhops pond, Springfield, near the government arsenal.

For the past week she had been a patient at a private hospital conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Curran on Dunmoreland st., a short distance from the pond. According to Mrs. Curran, she tried to hold her head under water yesterday while being given a bath.

While walking this morning with Curran, she insisted on being allowed to sit on an ice company pier.

Later, after returning to the house, Curran learned she was missing. He ran to the pond and saw her sweater on the bank. He plunged in and found the body.

Some of the rescued believed an explosion had occurred aboard the dredge, but others said the "crushing salt water in contact with the fires and sending up billows of steam caused that belief.

The Toledo, owned by the G. H. Freyman Co. of New York and under lease to the War Department, was being towed by the Boston tug Clara H. Deane. The Coast Guard patrol boat 278, which performed most of the rescue work, under Boatswain Ralph McCurdy, was escorting it to Lynn for the ceremonies. City officials were waiting off Lynn to lead the parade.

LIFEBOAT CAPSIZES.

Heading directly into the wind, the dredge began to experience trouble as the big waves struck it and poured over the sides and through the cable holes. Within a few minutes the hold was half full and the vessel was foundering.

Capt. George Keay signaled to the tug, which cast loose its towline and circled back to the dredge. The coast guard boat hastened to the other side.

The heavy sea prevented the rescue craft from getting close alongside and, one by one, the crew of the dredge took to the water and swam and struggled through the waves to safety.

A lifeboat was shoved off from the Toledo, but it overturned and it was to this that the captain and five men clung when they were hurled into the sea as the dredge rolled on its side.

Rats had come up out of the hold and taken to the water and were swimming about among the men. One perched on the shoulders of Peter Parrott, and he, thinking it was the Toledo's mascot, a cat, let it remain there until his rescuers knocked it off.

The rescued were taken to Lamper's wharf, Lynn. Capt. Keay and the last five to leave the dredge were suffering from immersion and were taken to Lynn police station for treatment.

ALL PHILADELPHIA MEN

These men, in addition to the captain, were Parrott, Kenneth Simes, Olan Knutson, Gus Nelson and Stanley Carlson.

All the crew live in Philadelphia. The others are Albert Ouillette, Charles Keefe, Harry Lee, Harvey Kemp, George Gallagher, Donald Gallagher, John Olson, Samuel Mesheim, Martin Coen, Peter Fisher, Knute Klengfeld, Benjamin Ikoan and Louis Martin.

Coast Guards who participated in the rescue were Boatswain Mc Curdy, Lester Everette, William Wood, William Burley, F. J. Josephs, James Mullin and Stanley Wilson.

The dredge was being towed to Lynn from the army base to begin the harbor project which has been agitated for 60 years. The government is contributing $750,000 for the dredging and the city of Lynn $300,000.

"And then ask him how much his men are collecting. I cannot understand why these violations are not seen by policemen whose duty it is to see them. And while we are discussing these matters, let me read a letter to you which is before me now."

WOMAN HAS A KICK

The letter, dated Sept. 27, was written to Mayor Curley by a woman living in Glenville ave., Allston. It was turned over to Commissioner Conry. It read:

"Will you kindly have your police department function properly and put a stop to automobiles parking all night on streets out in Allston, such as Glenville and Long and Quint aves. and Price rd., and also stop residents from crowding autos between houses in that section, which are a great fire hazard."

"The policemen in that section are either blind or they are aiding and abetting these law violations. I see these cars on the street every night without lights, and some of them from other states.

"It is rumored that some of the law violators are friends of the cops and that the cops wink at these unlawful acts for a consideration. In any event, the public good and safety requires immediate corrective action. Kindly do what you can for us out here.

NINE IN ONE DRIVEWAY

"P. S.—Please have the fire department officials also take action to prevent serious fires here by these cars being jammed in between the houses. There is a very serious situation at — Pride rd., where eight or nine cars are left in the driveway every night.

"In the event of fire it would be impossible to get a ladder or a line of hose into this congested area, and there would be a serious loss of life."

Conry told the reporter that as (Conry) had written to Hultman about this matter also, "but perhaps you can get a reply."

The police commissioner was handed a copy of Conry's statement and asked for a comment.

"Wait until I read it," Hultman said, "before I answer."

When Leaves Turn to Gold

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We have a nice amateur collection down in Washington.

Result is that we have the world by the tail with a downhill pull.

Gold is the most valuable of all metals because it is so pliable. Until you try to borrow it.

It's as dangerous as an army mule that kicks when it is mad and bites when it is happy.

But we have plenty of it. Ain't been an well off since Ben Franklin went to Philadelphia with a loaf of bread under his arm.

Sweden just tossed its gold standard overboard after discovering that you can borrow a match but you can't borrow from a match company.

Only U. S. and France are in good yellow metallic shape. And this is one time we ain't going to holler:

"Lafayette, here it is."

HOOVER SEEKS TO CUT NAVY $61,000,000

Washington, Sept. 29 (AP)—Aroused by the efforts of certain navy officials to gain an increased appropriation, President Hoover is seeking to subtract a total of $61,000,000 from the $401,000,000 requested by the department for the year 1933.

This became clear in official quarters today, but the names of the navy officers involved were not forthcoming.

The President is endeavoring to effect the cut in the estimates which without affecting the construction program in the end may be increased to a total of $65,000,000 for 1933, as compared with the $50,000,000 for 1932.

The President has asked every department to reconsider its request for appropriations. Should the departments themselves actively and publicly advocate requests for increased appropriations, the chief executive plans to carry the fight for economies to the American people.

Mr. Hoover feels that some officials within the Navy Department already have made such an effort.

There has been, however, no discord reported between the chief executive and Secretary Adams.

Dave Meets 7 Ideals Aimee Set for Man She Could Adore

Aimee Semple McPherson and her singing husband, David Hutton, are shown seated at the organ of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles. Aimee is studying voice culture with her new mate.

Following is the second chapter of Aimee Semple McPherson's own story of her romance with and marriage to David Hutton, the singer. Aimee has seven requirements for her ideal man and Hutton fills them all, she says.

By Aimee Semple McPherson

High Priestess of Angelus Temple

(Copyright, 1931.)

Los Angeles, Sept. 29 (US)—Long ago I formulated seven rules for an ideal husband. They were:

1—He must have ideals and principles founded upon the word of God.

2—He must have a pleasant and even disposition.

3—He must have a good sense of humor.

4—He must have a record of accomplishment.

5—He must be everlastingly loyal and courageous.

6—He must have the same interests as mine—music and evangelism, a burning desire to carry the Word to the ends of the earth.

7—He must love me.'

Dave seemed to be possessed of all these requisites of mine. And so I decided to accept him.

Song Binds Betrothal

It was in the middle of August that I gave him my answer. He told me again that he loved me, and I believed him.

"Aimee, I will do everything in my power to make you happy," he promised. He placed an engagement ring on my finger—a square cut diamond mounted with baguettes and engraved "D. to A."

POSTAL BANKS DEPOSITS MAKE BIG GAINS

Washington, Sept. 29 (INS)—Timidity among small savings account depositors over the stability of banks has so increased the business of the postal savings system during the past year that Postmaster-General Brown has decided to renew upon Congress his recommendation that the maximum for individual deposits be extended from $2500 to $5000.

Deposits during the past year, Brown declared, have more than doubled and the system today is expanding at a pace never before recorded in the 20 years of its existence.

This he attributes entirely to depression conditions and the confidence the small depositor has in the trustworthiness of the government.

At the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1930, the postal savings system had 466,401 depositors with a total of $175,271,886 in accumulations.

On June 30, 1931, the number of depositors had jumped to 762,172 and the money they had asked Uncle Sam to keep for them had risen to $345,887,460. Two months later, Aug. 21, deposits had mounted to $414,865,888.

Warmer Weather Now On Its Way

Don't start the heater yet.

A warmer spell is on the way, the weather man announced today. Higher temperatures have put in an appearance in the west, this side of the Rockies, and are due to begin to make themselves felt here tomorrow.

The prediction is for continued fair weather. The humidity was below normal today and this, combined with a northwest wind, produced the dry, crisp tang in the air.

LEAGUE OFFERS ARMS TRUCE

Geneva, Sept. 29 (AP)—A proposal to suspend construction of armaments for one year from Nov. 1 was submitted today to the governments participating in the 1932 disarmament conference by the League of Nations Council.

The proposal is a compromise between the Italian project for an immediate truce and objections interposed by Japanese.

The United States by Hugh R. Wilson, ambassador to Switzerland, already has approved a one-year armament holiday, except for destroyer construction. Great Britain is in favor but Japan is opposed and the attitude of France is not known.

The 12th Assembly of the League adjourned this afternoon.

The council, however, remained in session to consider the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria.

BANDITS GIVEN LONG TERMS

Lawrence, Sept. 29—Six Haverhill youths were sentenced to state prison today for armed robbery by Judge Louis Cox following verdicts of guilty yesterday by a jury in Superior Court.

Sentences of 15 to 17 years each were given Samuel Agrizis, 20, of Tower st.; Felix Cook, 21, of River st.; Ambrose Yenna, 18, of River st. and John Mouzi, 23, of Varnum st.

Frank Kapela, 21, and John Serafera, 21, the latter living on Ayer st., were sentenced to serve five to seven years each. Judge Cox said the evidence showed they were neither so dangerous nor so malicious as the others.

They were convicted of armed robbery of John Rawnsley, Methuen druggist, on April 27. They used a sawed-off shotgun and robbed Rawnsley of about $40.

Three youths who pleaded guilty and testified for the state will be sentenced later. They are Zerveles Primrose st., Haverhill; William Borello, Elm st., Lawrence, and Joe Zilo of Elm st., Lawrence.

You can make a definite contribution to Fire Prevention Week by increasing your efforts to safeguard your own home and business.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

has always been an active factor in Fire Prevention Week—through the National Board of Fire Underwriters and other organizations, and through its local agents in all states.

The purpose of Fire Prevention Week is not only to reduce the fire waste, but to save human lives. In doing that, further reductions in the average cost of insurance will be justified—a cost that has consistently declined for many years.

"DIVORCE ME, DEAR," PROVES AMUSING COMEDY

THE VOICE OF Broadway
By Louis Sobol

Down Memory Lane!

(With Charles Dillingham)

These good old days as a newspaper reporter on the Chicago Herald. My sidekicks, Finley Peter Dunne, George Ade and Frank Vanderlip, covering assignments.

My first meeting with Charles Frohman when I was sent to interview him at the Briggs House and he refused me. I wrote a fake interview and printed a picture of an old Hebrew on Halstead st. with his caption. Frohman liked the fake interview and picture so much he gave me a job as his press agent.

Visiting my old home town, Hartford, Conn., and renewing acquaintance with Winchell Smith and Frank Furlong, then a prominent banker.

When I was made manager of the Madison Square Theater in Madison Square Garden. The sensational shooting of Stanford White by Harry K. Thaw.

Charles Frohman made me general manager of his enterprises and theaters.

I then decided to become a producer on my own and my first production was "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Julia Marlowe as the star. The show opened at the Criterion Theater, 44th st. and Broadway. What a thrill it was to click with a big hit on my first venture!

I saw a team of blackface comedians in vaudeville. I recommended them to Charles Frohman, who put them in "The Girl From Up There," starring Edna May. These two comedians were the hit of the show. They were Dave Montgomery and Fred Stone.

Hamlin, Mitchell & Fields then took Montgomery and Stone and starred them in "The Wizard of Oz," in Chicago at the old Grand Opera House.

The porter on the train we used to take down from Hartford. He used to save seats for Frohman, Winchell Smith and myself every morning. I later made him a carriage man at one of my theaters. He is still with me, as my personal messenger. His name is George Fields.

When I starred Montgomery and Stone in "The Red Mill." The sensation we created when we built the first moving electric sign.

Helen Broderick, now one of the stars in "The Band Wagon," was a showgirl in my big extravaganza. She teamed with another showgirl who was working in my shows, Jeanne Eagels.

Mae Murray, Florence Walton, Bill Allen, Ina Claire, Vera Maxwell, Lillian Lorraine, Martha Mansfield, Kay Laurell, Lilyan Tashman, the Fairbanks sisters, Hazel Dawn, Flo Leeds, Cleo Mayfield, Elizabeth Brice, Ann Pennington, Vivienne Segal, Flora Revalles, Emma Haig, Yvonne Shelton, and many others, all started with me as showgirls in my various productions at the Century, Globe and New Amsterdam Theaters.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce was another showgirl who later made good in the big city.

When Bill Le Baron, now head of the RKO Studios, wrote his first libretto for me. It was "The Echo." Le Baron also wrote the lyrics. Bessie McCoy Davis, the Dolly sisters and Richard Carle were the stars.

Producing the first "Hitchy-Koo." When we went into rehearsals we had an audition. Raymond Hitchcock and myself turned down a girl who sang for us. The name of the song was "What the Hell Do We Care About the Show?" Another girl sang and we hired her. She was Grace Moore. The girl we turned down was Mary Lewis. Later both girls became the biggest of operatic stars with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Bobby Connelly was assistant stage manager of this "Hitchy-Koo" company.

The good old days of the New York Hippodrome, when Bills Sunday played Sunday concerts. The big tank and the spectacles. R. H. Burnside used to stage for us. Mr. Lee Ochs, Marcelino and Tolo, the clowns, who used to give me many off-stage laughs. Sousa and his band playing in the pit.

Discovering Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle and watching them become dancing sensations. When we starred them in "Watch Your Step" with Frank Tinney, Harry Fox, the Dolly sisters and others.

A young student came to me from the University of Pennsylvania. He wanted a job, so I put him in the chorus of "Orange Blossoms." He is now one of our leading juveniles. His name is Jack Whiting.

When Will Rogers pinch-hitted for Fred Stone without a contract. Just a shake of the hand sealed the bargain.

Flo Ziegfeld, A. L. Erlanger and myself owned the Universal Pictures Corporation for one hour. We sold it back to Carl Laemmle, the original owner, within that period after we discussed the concern.

The happy days of big receipts when I had "Watch Your Step" playing the New Amsterdam, "Bon Chu" at the Globe, Elsie Janis and her gang at the Gaiety, the New York Hippodrome, and "The Night Boat," at the Liberty, all playing at the same time. Each show sold out to absolute capacity, and our gross combined on the week reached almost $400,000 on all five shows. A record that still stands today!

Violet Heming Tops Cast of Seasoned Players in Tremont Offering

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It was interesting, if not important, that in "Divorce Me, Dear," at the Tremont last night, the sins of society were frisked from Great Neck, L. I., to the more classic regions of Beacon Hill. In most respects the comedy was just one of those strange conceptions of dramaturgy, in which society and its best people were always looking for a new thrill. Usually these settle you somewhere along the gilded shores of Long Island.

* * *

About the only reason for moving the locale north and east must be attributed to a desire of the young author, Katherine Roberts, to find a suitable setting for the puritanical Aunt Martha, who did considerable fussing in the story. With less than a week's preparation, Violet Heming most efficiently eased herself into the leading role, that of a bored young matron, who for no honest reason, decided to divorce a perfectly moral and sound husband for a fling at life with a hand-picked lover. Sure-ly, that has more of the ring of Long Island's fashionable north shore than the cramped by-ways in and about Beacon st. The comedy was hardly on its way before everybody had the final score pinned in his hat. There was no suspense; you understood as clearly as if you had been presented a list of specifications, that Veronica would not divorce Peter, and things would end exactly where they began.

Nicholas Young

The Cast

Mary Adams	Francesca Bruning
Chever	Robert Vivian
Geoffrey Lawrence	Richie Ling
Veronica Vare	Violet Heming
Eleanor Lawrence	Anne Sutherland
Kenneth Gardner	G. P. Huntley, Jr.
Peter Vare	Reginald Mason
Celeste	Andree Corday
Andre Guigne	Gustave Rolland

But the young author, and she is very young, did perform a few minor miracles. Gifted with a talent for composing smart dialogue, she proved herself almost a genius at turning tame and inconsequential situations into moments of rather cheerful amusement. With material so thin that it would tease a micrometer, she had created some very fanciful comedy. There were no boisterous moments—you would hardly expect them—but these descendants of the original Beacon Hill brahmins. Probably not once did the audience lose its self control in laughter; but it did chuckle, even audibly, from the rise of the curtain to its final descent.

While "Divorce Me, Dear" will hardly be inscribed in the records as an outstanding comedy, it will surely take its place with useful examples of good, safe and peaceful entertainment. It presented no vital problem, and its one moral lapse was too conventionally theatrical to bring about even the lifting of a single eyebrow. With these restrictions it was still surely acted. Miss Heming, of course, even with her restricted preparation, made Veronica a girl of genuine interest. Miss Heming would do that, naturally, for she knows her theater and its pressing demands upon human as well as artistic qualities. "Divorce Me, Dear" needed all that Miss Heming could give it last night and she never faltered. It might have been an unequal task if she had not put a magic touch upon the performance.

The fortunate dramatist is he-or she-who sees his opus for the first time in hands that are capable. Miss Roberts, therefore, is favored by fortune. Hardly less important than Miss Heming in the evening's misadventures were Reginald Mason, Anne Sutherland, Richie Ling and G. P. Huntley, Jr. These seasoned artists formed a ballyhoo quartet that never left Miss Heming in a moment's doubt. Without them she might have failed or, at least, edged a bit to leeward. From top to bottom, it was a cast for which the author should take time out for an hour of thanksgiving.

* * *

"Divorce Me, Dear" proved itself just an amusing comedy of present day folk and their small private problems. You could smile with it, and even laugh, moderately. It was a friendly little soiree in drama that lifted drooping spirits. That made it pretty good medicine for these times.

AMONG BEAUTIES IN AL JOLSON'S SHOW

Wood Urges Optimism in Films

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Sam Wood, the movie director, is out for more optimism in pictures. He thinks the sunshine will do more for films in the long run than any other factor—the sunshine of so shading the drama that the world will seem a good old world after all, despite all the sex and the villainy that may play a part in the story's motivation.

"The keynote of a good picture," declares Wood, who has turned out many box office successes and ought to know his business, "is optimism."

It so happens that he has played upon that theme in all his pictures. He announces that he has done so in his latest production, "New Adventures of Wallingford," in Cosmopolitan which stars William Haines.

Wood explains that he does not mean that all photoplays shall have happy endings.

"I personally don't like unhappy endings," he goes on. "But they are sometimes O. K. That the story ends unhappily does not mean there must not be optimism breathing through the picture. Human beings and human nature should be mirrored as basically sound and sane and clean.

"I had the problem in Wallingford. He is a grafter, but a genial sort of a chap, and underneath he is all right, so he sees the light and reforms.

"I take the stand that pictures must effervesce with the joy of living and loving, must portray the happiness of life, even when bringing out the seamy sides, and must leave the good taste of being alive. We all want to live, and theater patrons are the happier and the better amused and satisfied when there is optimism running like the golden vein through the film. The idea is old-fashioned in show business; it pays, because the audiences of today go to the theater to be entertained, they realize the ills of life and life's joys, and feel down deep that there is always the silver lining, that the sunshine is there, the life is worth living.

"We are all lovers of optimism—and save the billious natured folk."

Exeter Theater

Will Rogers in "Young as You Feel" and Eddie Quillan in "Sweepstakes" are the attractions for today and tomorrow at the Exeter. The last half of the week Constance Bennett will be seen in "The Common Law," Richard Arlen in "The Secret Call" will also be shown.

Max Fields on Howard Bill

One of the big shows on the Columbia circuit is at the Old Howard this week, which is also offering a continuous vaudeville and talking pictures. The burlesque is presented by Max Fields and his "Kuddling Kuties." Dan Jordan is skilled as an artistic stepper and also hasa good voice. Jack LaMont, with Jack Dickson, provides much of the humor. Anna Fink, Sally Van, Jackie James, Jeanette Allehan and Mayte Blackstone are among the stars.

In addition the Howard has on the vaudeville bill The Three Balliotts, Foster and Van, and Ewing Eaton.

The midnight performance comes on Friday night. The World Series baseball returns will be announced every playing day.

Nancy Carroll Chosen by Paramount for Lead in "The Jazz King"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 29—Two years ago in New York, James Creelman outlined a play that he sold to Charles Dillingham. He called it "The Jazz King" and had high hopes that one day it would be produced on Broadway. But when the depression hit New York, Mr. Dillingham decided not to produce a play that called for such expensive sets.

Being a business man, Mr. Dillingham promptly sold it to Paramount. Ernest Pascal and Viola Brothers Shore are collaborating on the adaptation and the dialogue and Nancy Carroll has been selected for the lead. So, you see, it will be well into January before the picture gets started. Miss Carroll has a month's more work on "The Man I Killed" and then she goes to New York to play the lead in "Wild Beauty."

Lloella O Parsons

Sheets Gallagher and Miriam Hopkins are the other two players selected. Remember, Universal made "The King of Jazz." Well, "The Jazz King" isn't any relation to it.

A letter written by Mae Murray in her own handwriting tells of two offers. One is a personal appearance contract for 16 months. I'm guaranteed," writes Mae, "One half of one million dollars. I play one, two, and three night stands. The other, a picture offer. Mae Laments, is one third of the first contract but 'I am so lonesome in New York that the chances are I may return to Hollywood."

• • •

Our Sallie Filers plays the part of a "Mae Murray Model." When she was told that she would play opposite Warner Baxter in the picture someone on the lot said to her, "It is the best room and we only want the best." [illegible] Sallie Filers

Seen and Heard

A Hollywood romance that seems to me developing at the moment is that of Mrs. John McCormick, recently divorced wife of Colleen Moore's ex-husband, and Dean Markham. Mr. Markham is a local book seller and he and Janet met in Brentwood. The romance really started on the boat coming back after the McCormicks had decided to call it a day. Friends of both are of the opinion that it may not be long before an engagement is announced. Colleen Moore, by the way, writes to say she will be back among us soon. She has had several offers to make pictures but none of them have been exactly what she wants. She won't be any means finished on the screen, but after her many successful years she isn't willing to make a picture unless she knows it is going to be right for her. At the moment she is talking business to two companies but there is nothing definite.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JEFF ARNEZ, making more noise than his colored self, is over at the Hollywood Stadium with her motor and PHA CARRAS, with her MONA MARIS wearing one of the new shaped hats, also at the bouts. JACKIE COOPER, BOSCOE ARBUCKLE, WHEELER, BILLY WELLMAN, BEN LYON all in the ringside seats. EVELYN BRENT and LADY INVERCLYDE talking over London. Both were on the stage there. PAUL SNEED, of Paramount publicity fame is lighting his friends with trout caught on his vacation. Dozens of film executives at the football game. RICHARD BARTHELMESSES entertaining with a real dinner party to welcome BESSIE LOVE home. JACK OAKIE taking a bow as captain of Paramount's baseball team. PERCY DANIELS who has been seriously ill since the birth of her daughter improving each day. That's all today.

So It's Monkey Business, Eh?

Groucho Marx delivered the view the other day that signs and omens are ridiculous things. Then on the principle that all of us are all the Marx Brothers even in their picture "Monkey Business" now at the Paramount Olympia he proceeded carefully to ignore the following list of important omens:

"Rapping on wood is a sure sign that one's knuckles will be sore.

"A black cat crossing in front of a person signifies that the animal is going somewhere.

"Friday is a bad day for those who dislike fish.

"Throwing salt over one's shoulder is likely to give the impression that the wearer has dandruff.

"When a person's nose itches it means he should scratch it.

"Thirteen is unlucky at a dinner when the host has only twelve chops.

"Singing before breakfast often brings a quarrel or fight with the neighbors if they are trying to sleep.

Dancers Score at Scollay

The Scollay vaudeville bill this week, headed by the Mary Corbett dance team, is a hit.

One blues singer Dora Greenger, a local girl, is receiving tremendous applause for her acrobatic dancing. The closing scene was taken from Hazel Hoe's Paris dance in Simple Simon. The original stage setting is by Eugene Quinn, who does the [illegible] dance in the [illegible] Hot Shots dancers who provide an amazing variety of dance steps. "Ever since the world began love has ruled supreme," it began.

And as he finished he looked into my eyes and sang "Just as matchless as your eyes, dear, that's my faith in you."

I was happy. Dave said he was happy. We were to be married. He wanted the ceremony to be just as soon as possible. I said need wasn't, against too much haste.

For a month we talked over plans. Both of us prayed and he searched the good Lord for advice.

Finally I decided to be married secretly in Arizona to avoid the three days wait which is necessary in California between the time of applying for a marriage license and being granted one.

We wanted to escape the horde of newspaper reporters and photographers who hound my footsteps and make life very miserable for me at times although, as I've always known they have been among my best friends, nevertheless they are maddening, but always generous and kind in the end.

Secret Leaks Out

Our original plans were for an airplane elopement to Arizona without anyone knowing about it until it was all over. But Dave is too much enough gaga away the secret.

Dave and I thought it best to do no more. Then we would be married immediately. Our arrangements for the ceremony were to be quite [illegible] from here. We planned to meet at dawn the next day. Sunday.

Of course I told my son Rolf and his wife of my intentions. I asked them if they wanted to come along. But they said:

"I wouldn't miss it for the world," my boy said.

I was so excited Saturday night that I hardly knew what I was doing.

When we Dave and I reached the airport to take our plane to Yuma Arizona about 100 miles from Los Angeles, I was shaking all over.

THIS IS LIFE

VACATION ENDS AT LAST AND VACATION TOWNS ARE GLAD OF IT

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

TODAY IS NO DAY to be packing up and going home. (I am writing this on last Friday, if you'll pardon the bull.) Monday next (which was yesterday) will see the opening of the Factory, as irreverent undergraduates and professors have been known to name the great white-domed building that sits by the Charles. The place will suddenly spring into life with 3000 students, probably more, and more than a thousand others who serve their needs—professors, deans, janitors, stenographers and trained nurses. Suddenly the dynamo begins to speed up, if that is what dynamos do—and there is the swift, steady, purposeful hum of another year's activities.

Nevertheless, it's crool 'ard, as the captured wrong-doer was wont to say in the good old days of English fiction, to leave all this cool, breezy, sunny September beauty of the North Shore. The best days are beginning now, after the heat of the summer, and the real Rockporters know it full well as they look with speculative eye at the few belated summer boarders and wonder how long they will be cumbering the earth.

They Save the Nation

Spring on the North Shore is bleak and busy, with everybody too intensely occupied to mind the damp rawness of the air that lingers well into June. But late September and October, Indian summer, the beginnings of autumn, are periods of blessed relaxation after a summer of brisk activity.

At least it seems relaxed around here. But over in East Gloucester there is a great farm which I like to visit, run by two brothers and their wives and a sister—the very salt of the earth!—where one season seems simply to merge into another without any visible sign of letup. Nature drives hard, but these blessed people drive themselves harder! Spring must be a very frenzy of planting, with one eye on the early markets and the other on the enormous summer crop. And summer is another long frenzy of picking and planting again and selling the most gorgeous fruits and vegetables man ever ate. And yet, for all their constant busyness, any one of the dear people seems always to have time for a joke and a laugh, a story or a little gift of flowers or salt fish, and for general neighborliness. While people like these still carry on the country is safe, in spite of the soft hands and eager wits in Wall Street.

But the farm life is self-contained. It lives by the seasons and the sun and the rain, set apart from the town. In the town the calendar seems to be set by two dates, July 1, when the summer boarders come and everybody who possibly can gets a job that will give him or her a cut of the summer money, and Labor Day, when the town, to alien eyes, seems to shut up altogether.

When Town Wakes Up

But that is a mistake. If you ever have lived here through September and October, and even into November as I have, you will know that after Labor Day the town really wakes up. We city folks seem to think that a period of hibernation sets in until once more we favor these parts with the light of our countenances. Stuff and nonsense!

The moment Labor Day has passed into history and the rear-guard of the cottagers has shipped its last trunk and rolled away in grotesquely loaded sedans, the town settles seriously to the business of living. The summer boarders have gone—good riddance! That is the expressed or unexpressed thought, not only here but all up and down the coast from Provincetown to Bar Harbor. For one may own a granite castle, with walled rock gardens and garage and guest house complete, but one is still a summer boarder.

Summer boarders clutter up the town. Their cars jam the main street, necessitating traffic officers and draining the town budget. They swarm on the streets, dressed in outlandish costumes and colors of more than Oriental splendor. They bother the shop-keepers by buying out their stocks in wasteful fashion. They monopolize the bathing beach.

They bring in good money, it is true—and the town needs it badly since the quarries shut down and the nearby stocking and seine-net factories went on part time or closed altogether. Nevertheless, the town breathes more easily when they are gone. No malice, you understand, no active dislike, except here and there, but a long, slow, happy sigh of relief. We New Englanders like to keep ourselves to ourselves!

And Then the Fun Begins

No more is the local paper full of the ephemeral and probably sinful doings of the little theaters and art associations, costume balls and pageants and the like. The yacht club and the golf club are local institutions and keep going under their own power. And all the local societies that fold up for the summer immediately get active. The Red Men and the Odd Fellows, the Pythian Sisters and the Rebeccas and the Finnish societies both the Communist crowd and the Temperance crowd, begin to stage installations and advertise bean suppers and even, if the weather is mild, moonlight wienie roasts on rocks where the summer boarder no longer gallops.

The churches swing into battle line and the Ladies' Aid resumes its efforts toward a new vestry carpet. The Woman's Club opens its program with a ladylike bang, and the small boys and girls who spent their summer on the beach attend high school football practice with consistent devotion.

And all over the town the belated summer boarder sees people he never saw before, the genuine dyed-in-the-wool townspeople who, like the god of the priests of Baal, must have spent the summer months sleeping or on a journey—for no alien eye has seen them. Now they go about their lawful occasions in their own conception of proper autumnal get-up, and take up life where they dropped it before the barbarians came.

Meanwhile, I go back to work. Work, as the oldest theological tradition tells us, is a punishment for sin. It is also, unfortunately, the only means of keeping alive that human ingenuity has discovered, unless the political engineers succeed in getting the dole for all of us. Our New England, on the whole, prefers to work.

And Boston, in the autumn, isn't so bad, either.

'ENJOY LIFE,' WOMAN, 100, ADVISES

Chaperon? Ha-Ha!

George Huntington Hartford, 2d, heir to chain store millions, who said today that Miss Mildred King's story about her being his love chaperon was "all wet."

SCANLON'S LOVE SUIT TO JURY

The $100,000 alienation of affections suit of Thomas A. Scanlon, Back Bay dancing master against George D. Pike, retired hosiery manufacturer, went to the jury in Superior Court today, with the defendant pictured as a domineering business man who took what he wanted.

In his final argument for the plaintiff, Atty. Harry F. R. Dolan recared Pike's story that he had "lent" by Mrs. Scanlon, was ad nonsense.

"Mr. Pike is a strong, domineering man," said Atty. Dolan. "His statement that Mrs. Scanlon lied him around is all nonsense. There was no evidence produced to show he has ever taken his own wife out. If he was so amenable to Mrs. Scanlon's suggestion, why didn't he take his own wife to theaters and parties?"

"He was a high-powered businessman who went out with his hired dancing teacher, being very sympathetic and confidential with her. He even gave her funds so she could be more independent of her husband."

Judge O'Connell delivered a brief charge and the case was given to the jury just before noon.

Atty. Edward O. Proctor had previously completed his argument in the defendant, declaring Scanlon's evidence had failed

ESCAPE FROM BANDIT TRIO

Three holdup men today met shopkeeper resistance from two individual victims whom they attempted to rob at gunpoint in Forsyth st, Chelsea.

The trio approached Barney Magnes, Chestnut st, and Edward Pratt of Bloomingdale st, Chelsea, as they sat in Magnes car. The bandits ordered Magnes to drive down the street.

Instead, Magnes and Pratt brushed aside the gun of one of the men named on them and leaped from the car. The bandits took the car and abandoned it a few streets away.

HARTFORD HEIR SAYS LOVE GIRL IS 'ALL WET'

Harvard Student, Caught at Bath's Brink, Ridicules Miss King's $100,000 Story

George Huntington Hartford, 2d, today for the first time voiced his opinion of Miss Mildred King, Boston pianist, who claims to have performed a $100,000 job for his mother by rescuing him from the lures of a New York adventuress and marrying him off to a nice girl.

His opinion is that Miss King is "all wet."

He said so very neatly while in a fair way to arriving, literally, in the same state.

The Boston Evening American found the Newport heir to chain store millions at his room in John Winthrop House, Harvard, preparing to embark on his sophomore year at the university.

"THE FAMILY DECIDES."

He was attired in the lower section of a pair of green silk pajamas and headed in the direction of a shower.

"I'm sorry," he flung over his shoulder, "but I can't say anything. The family has decided nothing could be said."

He ducked into the shower room and, closing the door, called:

"But if I was saying anything I would say she was all wet."

Later, when the shower was finished, Hartford said:

"I'd like to say plenty. I'd like to say enough to fill a whole newspaper. But I'm under instructions of lawyers and cannot discuss the case."

He had nothing to say regarding his secret marriage last April to Miss Eliza Gilpatrick of West Virginia, but a person of the freshman class at Lowell in Cambridge.

AND SHE WON'T TALK

The former Miss Gilpatrick is believed to be the "Cambridge society girl" in whom Miss King claims to have interested Hartford, at the behest of his mother, to disrupt his affair with an unidentified New York woman.

Trial of Miss King's suit for $100,000 against Mrs. Henrietta Hartford George's mother and a leader of New York and Newport society, is pending in federal court here.

Miss King, when informed that Hartford was of the opinion she was "all wet," said she, too, was very sorry, but she, too, had decided to say nothing about the case. However, she really meant it.

Final Curtain

At last, my hero, I can speak my mind
To tell you that your knees were a bore,
Your love songs lagged a half a beat behind,
I sometimes think you never learned the score

We played two wistful lovers on the stage
Perhaps that's why you always missed your cue
And when you kissed me I would burn—with rage.
And now, praise be, I'm glad the show is through

You're just a trifle wheezy; when you sang
I noticed that you sometimes had a stutter
Outside of these things—you give me a pang
But we are through—as close as bread and butter.

So we must go on playing man and maid

DELANEY SAYS MAYOR 'PICKS LEHAN GRAVE'

Councillor Adds the Story Only Proves Honesty of Late City Treasurer

Charges that Mayor Richard M. Russell's discovery of $4700 in cash in the vaults of the Cambridge city treasurer's office was "the most contemptible piece of political scheming I have ever known, but one that rebounds and proves the honesty of the late City Treasurer Henry F. Lehan," was made today by City Councilor Patrick J. Delaney.

The cash and as much more in outlawed checks were found as the result of an audit ordered by Mayor Russell when William J. Shea succeeded to the post of city treasurer after the death of Lehan.

VINDICATES LEHAN

"Mayor Russell only proves the honesty of the late Treasurer Lehan," declared Councillor Delaney.

"I am not surprised at the story. Mayor Russell had a sharp knife in Mr. Lehan's back from the time Russell took office until the day he attended Mr. Lehan's funeral and saw him into the grave.

"Now, with Mr. Lehan dead, the Mayor got himself a pick and is driving it into Mr. Lehan's grave, hopeful that he may be able to exhume the body, so that he may perform a political postmortem before the eyes of the citizens of Cambridge and thereby ride back into office on a shroud."

"What a to-do!" he asked. Three men tried to tell him at once. Wearily Ludwig checked them. "Anyway, what does it matter?"

[illegible]

Steady, said Ludwig once more. "There is, unfortunately. Have you got all the identity discs, Albert?" he then asked. Albert replied Trotzke adding softly so that Knoche should not hear it, Schroder's among them.

[illegible] Ludwig said.

"Ah, then he wasn't taken prisoner"—Which is he?"

[illegible]

Don't unscrew, Ludwig," he implored. Bever turned around. "Albert," he said quietly.

FRIEND OF KOSOLE

[illegible]

"Does he know?" he asked, looking toward where Knoche was digging. Albert shook his head. "So, to it that the sergeant-major closes off," said he; "otherwise there'll be trouble."

[illegible]

I never saw the like of that before," he stammered. However did it happen?"

[illegible]

"Better say the prayer now and get back," said Albert coldly.

[illegible]

"He imagined they pelted you with jujubes up here," said Tjaden dryly.

[illegible]

"You shall be avenged," again and again. I looked at him, astonished.

"What's got you?" I asked him. "These aren't the first, you know. You'll have your work cut out, avenging them all." Then he said no more.

Daily True Story

The Way of a Maid

PAUL JARVIS sat under a tree with Milly Clare; the only light [illegible] through the club house windows on the sloping lawns and mercifully left them in the shadow.

They had sat there before during [illegible] dances. They had sat there after golf matches and after tennis parties. [illegible] said Paul [illegible] going to tell Milly she was the one [illegible] for him.

"But," she protested, freeing herself from an ardent embrace, "just why do you think we'd hit it off together?"

"Why not?" he answered, "we know the same people—we like the same things—we've got the same kind of background why shouldn't we live happily ever after?"

"I wonder," answered Milly. "I've been wondering about that a lot lately—and I'm not sure that we wouldn't both be making a mistake."

"But why," persisted Paul, "you've never talked this way before—something has happened—be a good sport and tell me what it is."

"All right," replied Milly, "I saw a man the other night—never mind his name—and somehow he intrigued me—now don't get jealous—I believe in being truthful and you've asked for the truth. Well, this man is just the opposite to us—he doesn't go in for the trivial things—he does things that are worth while—he's an explorer—he's spent years excavating in the East—he's used to roughing it—he speaks half a dozen languages and his adventures thrill me."

And he returns your liking?" asked Paul.

"Not exactly," said the girl, "at least I don't know it if he does—that's what bothering me—if I knew him better would I become more fascinated or less—"

"Well, you are an enigma," laughed Paul

TO THE TEST

"I am seriously thinking of putting the thing to the test," said Milly. "Afterward I'll be in a position to give you a definite answer about settling along for life at your side."

"And when am I to know—that is, if you're really serious"

"Oh, give me a week," she suggested; "that's fair enough, isn't it?"

"Fair enough," he agreed "A week from tonight then, if I can survive that long."

[illegible] Paul had received a [illegible] He had no [illegible] doubt that Milly would accept [illegible]

DISHING OUT BIT O' HASH FOR A CHANGE

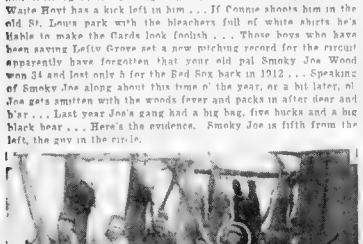
A little bit o' this an' that, fighting, football, fishing.
There's wrestling and a hunting, too, for that's what you've been wishing.
The worlds series this time o' year must get the biggest smash,
The dish we're handing you today is Hash! Hash! Hash'

A short time ago Commissioner Buckley notified all boxing clubs that no match could be announced until after the contracts were filed at the Commission. Were contracts filed for the announced Leonard-Livan match? Stop these promoters counting their eggs before they are hatched . . . Manager Bill McKechnie is the only Brave who will attend the World Series . . . Bill managed the Cards when they lost 4 straight to Yankees in '28 . . . Dave Morey got Bates off to a 2 to 0 victory. The old Dartmouth star is considered the Miracle Man of the smaller colleges. Who some big college hasn't snared him is something of a mystery . . . Billy O'Leary is starting his 12th season as a member of the Pere Marquettes . . . There's one player who would have been an All American had he gone to college . . . In proportion to his height Lou Brouillard has the longest reach of any boxer in the ring . . . Lou is 5 feet, 5¼ inches tall—65½ inches—yet his reach is 72½ inches, greater than many heavyweights. Here's Lou and his "stretch".

With the baseball season over Jack Slattery, the Braves' scout is scouting for smelts in the waters of Hull, his summer home . . . Br-r-r-r-r! Who said summer? . . . Chet Delano, Tufts freshman coach says all of the freshies are going in for sports . . . Wm Green, Bruins' trainer, is getting his kit ready for the hockey season . . . He believes in preparation . . . Coach Leo Daley of English High has another Frenn who promises to make football history for the Light and Dark Blue . . . Billy Delaney, Harry Stevens' right hand bower, may go to the Orient with the tour ng ball players . . . Eddie Sheehin is Dartmouth boxing coach but he is "all het up" over football . . . Eddie says the Dartmouth stadium will be jammed for the Holy Cross game.

The latest candidate for Wilbert Robinson's job is your old pal Frankie Frisch, the Fordham Flash . . . Councilor Dan Leahy of Cambridge, the stormy petrel of the old Boston Twilight League, may be one of the University City's two assessors . . . While aboard Harry Bernstein's "Aloha" recently George Grimm spotted a whale and now is going to change his brand . . . The small mouth bass is characterized as "inch for inch and pound for pound the gamest fish that swims" . . . That's right, but ever get a blue blowfish on your line? . . . The last one we caught we thought we had hooked a runaway horse.

While they are telling of the mighty pitching deeds that can be expected from Grove, Hallahan, Earnshaw, Derringer, Grimes and Walberg in the coming worlds serious don't forget that old Waite Hoyt has a kick left in him . . . If Connie shoots him in the old St. Louis park with the bleachers full of white shirts he's liable to make the Cards look foolish . . . Those boys who have been saving Lefty Grove set a new pitching record for the circuit apparently have forgotten that your old pal Smoky Joe Wood won 34 and lost only 5 for the Red Sox back in 1912 . . . Speaking of Smoky Joe along about this time o' the year, or a bit later, ol Joe gets smitten with the woods fever and packs in after deer and b'ar . . . Last year Joe's gang had a big bag, five bucks and a big black bear . . . Here's the evidence. Smoky Joe is fifth from the left, the guy in the circle.



Who'll Connie Mack fire at the Cards in the first game on Thursday. Ever since Connie flashed Howard Ehmke in the opener in 1929 the fans are looking for him to pull the unexpected . . . But its dollars to doughnuts that Grove or Earnshaw will start for the A's . . . If Connie attempts the unexpected Hoyt will get the assignment . . . Haines, or Hallahan, is most likely to be Street selection . . . Ball players say that Gabby is likely to hold Burleich Grimes to fire at the Athletics in the first game in enemy territory . . . Burleich is seasoned, experienced and supposedly of iron nerve . . . Bob Grove was relieved only twice this year . . . Earnshaw saved him on July 13 against Washington and Walberg got him out of a hole against the Yankees on August 29

Down in Lonaconing, Maryland, where Lefty Grove comes from they call him "Babe" not Bob . . . It seems that years ago there was a West Virginia football star named "Babe" Grove. Ever since then all the Groves in that neck of the woods have been called "Babe". Speaking of "Babe" the BABE himself was held to a tie by Lou Gehrig for home run honors . . . Moral victory went to Lou for he whaled out one homer he did not receive credit for . . . because of a mental lapse by Lyn Lary, who was on ahead and trotted to the dugout instead of rounding third. Gehrig lifted the ball over the fence but only got credit for three bases

You credit a homer to the man when over the fence he lures,
But Gehrig lifted one high and dry, yet only got three base.
When Lary forgot to shift his gears and failed to round out third,
And that's why Babe is tied with Lou—O, wasn't Lynn a "bird"!

BUILDING THE BOYS

Further and general excitement attended the announcement of the engagement of Basil Rathbone to Ouida Bergere. Basil could count on one eye upon signing contracts with the boys, immediately went to work with a will along publicity lines. Right of this point is where the microphone moguls outpass ers. In other words, a big band is sort of a fine thing to have around for fan and auto ograf purposes, but it hasn't the same punch as a single singer with a name that means a box office draw. AMERICAN CAN'S DOLLAR EXTRA CHECKS DROP

New York, Sept. 29—The Wall St. Stock Market was driven to new lows today by successive flurries of selling.

Rallies were able to show considerable resistance to the trend, but elsewhere losses of 1 to 4 points were numerous, with a few veritable issues registering wider losses.

CLOSING IS SOFT

The closing tone was soft. Sales approximated three million shares.

A rally in the last hour failed some strength when American Can Co's directors declared the usual annual extra dividend of $3 a share. This sufficed for a time in check the drop. But the improvement was mostly only temporary.

Rail shares, which had moved against the day's dominant downward trend, mostly lost their gains near the close.

U. S. Steel, American Telephone, duPont, Eastman and Public Service of New Jersey lost roughly $3 to $4 net. General Motors, heavily sold, dropped nearly $3, and General Electric was off $2. Radio Corp. Can lost a point net. Auburn and Coca Cola broke $12 or more. Losses in Consolidated Gas, Loew, Westinghouse and Woolworth, among others, ran to $2 or more.

All but two of the 20 most active stocks today closed above their lows for the session.

Rails showed notable resistance to the declining tendency. Selling was active at times. Bonds were again under pressure, although utilities were more moderate than yesterday's.

UNCERTAINTIES ABROAD

The market appeared still under the domination of uncertainties abroad. Steadiness of sterling exchange and recovery in the Scandinavian countries were encouraging, but news that the Stockholm Stock Exchange would be closed until further orders gave a measure of unsettlement in Europe.

The Paris Bourse closed with a heavy tone, and the London market was stagnated by uncertainties over the possibility of an election and the apparent deadlock in the government over a protective tariff.

The local money market was a little easier, with outside call loans at 1½ per cent, against 1¾ yesterday. The recent firmer tendency in medium to long term money rates, however, resulted in further pressure against the low-yield government securities.

The question as to whether increased taxation will be sought at the next Congress, or whether the government will continue to borrow by floating securities, is a further element of uncertainty from which Wall Street looks for little early relief.

PENN. CALLS FOR 140 ENGINES

Philadelphia, Sept. 29 (AP)—A $2,500,000 order, for the construction of 60 electric freight locomotives has been announced by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The locomotives constitute part of the equipment of 230 engines to be used when the Pennsylvania completes its electrification project between Philadelphia, New York and Washington, in 1934.

An additional order for 80 engines is soon to be given and 90 of a previous order are now ready.

Thirty engines will be constructed by the Lima Locomotive Works at Lima, O., 20 by the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Eddystone, Pa., and 10 in the Pennsylvania railroad shops at Altoona, Pa.

Paramount Publix Receipts Increase

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.)

Quite a few people are very enthusiastic over the idea that our criminals could all be reformed if we only had enough psychiatrists to examine them.

The trouble is we'll never know who our criminals are until psychiatrists look over our juries.

DAILY DOUBT

SHELBYVILLE, Ind.—Lil Dagover, German actress, flying to Hollywood, was forced down in a storm and took shelter in a farm house. While waiting for transportation she spent several hours in the farm kitchen assisting with household duties.

DISCUSSION CORNER

(Interviews with Henry Ford)

"We should not . . . I am not in accord with the teaching which abounds . . . that failure is an asset to future. Whatever was times been our wise and not a teacher ahead. On the contrary think of it as tragic. I abhor the word done. I see no further use may think that perhaps look into the matter everything has been the further will as as right as possible he able to look into —up in now— the future."—Ford New York Times. Men and Methods.

"An optimist," says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "must be a guy who doesn't believe anything he hears."

"He done me dirt."

MEN WHO DO THINGS

This is Zoroaster Diggles, night club proprietor, who has had all tables in his establishment put on rockers so that when they are bumped by dancers the ginger ale and White Rock will be spilled on the floor instead of the tablecloth. This will bring ginger ale sales up to normal, as Mr. Diggles found that customers were wringing out the tablecloths rather than buy more ginger ale.

Ans.—Yeah, that was my second husband. But he wasn't so well trained. Are you the guy who sent the carnations full of sneeze powder around to the stage door?
—Aunt (Footlights) Bella.

The polecat has a fulsome scent;
When it's around, it's evident.
At his departure no one grieves;
But sad is everyone he leaves.

PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

The Boston Port Authority is trying to bring the committee of the striking longshoremen and the committee representing the steamship owners and contracting stevedores together, as a result of a deadlock after the dock men quitting work on the Luckenbach liner J. L. Luckenbach last Friday.

Both the steamship owners and contracting stevedores agree that the men violated their agreement in abandoning the job for the cause they did, it is understood.

The longshoremen claimed the loads were too heavy in the slings-loads and the company refused to make them any lighter.

PACIFIC PASSENGERS

A limited number of passengers from Boston and New York to Pacific coast ports and back will be taken on the Shepard Line steamers, operators of a fleet of vessels in the intercoastal trade, it was announced by the Boston office. The new arrangement will go into effect next month with the sailing of the Marathon, recently purchased from the United States Shipping Board. Others in the service are the Sea Thrush, Sage Brush and Windrush.

BACK AGAIN

Making her first visit to the port of Boston in several years, the steamer Guyamapa of the United Fruit Co. fleet was diverted from Philadelphia here, arriving at Long Wharf from Jamaican ports. The Guyamapa, on reaching here, was diverted to Philadelphia.

British Editors Condemn Politics in League Court

How British opinion is coming to regard the so-called Permanent Court of International Justice of the League of Nations is made apparent by comment appearing in the leading reviews on the League Court's recent decision against the Austro-German customs union plan.

Four important publications—the New Statesman and Nation, the Saturday Review, the London Spectator and the Week-End Review—have recorded their views, and in each instance the remarks are severely critical. French influence in the League Court, the palpably political nature of its decision, and its adverse effect on public opinion in the United States, are all stressed.

Excerpts from the four editorial articles follow:

From the Week-End Review

The two latest instances of French political influence have done nothing to further European co-operation.

The verdict of the World Court in The Hague has not reenforced confidence in an organization which hitherto had won an enviable reputation for international impartiality.

When the seven judges of Great Britain, Japan, Belgium, Germany, Holland, the United States and China are defeated by eight others, including the judges of France, Poland, Rumania, Salvador and Colombia, IT IS VERY DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE THAT NO POLITICAL PRESSURE HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO BEAR ON THE JUDGES in order that they may declare the proposed Austro-German Customs Union to be in contradiction to the treaties of peace.

It will take the Permanent Court a long time to live down this unfortunate verdict.

From the New Statesman and Nation

The International Court is not, we fear, likely to add to its prestige by its opinion on the Austro-German Customs Union.

It is not only that the basis of all three opinions is POLITICAL RATHER THAN JUDICIAL IN NATURE.

But even more serious is the nature of the national division in the Court. Broadly, it may be said that the Latin nations are divided against the Teutonic—Japan siding with the minority. The judges, in a word, hardly acted as an impartial body of jurists concerned with a scientific problem of interpretation.

It is not unfair to prophesy that it will be a long time before one of the great Powers is willing to seek the advice of the Court upon so grave an issue.

From the London Spectator

What really emerges is doubt as to the wisdom of encouraging a Court whose strength lies in its detachment from political entanglements to rule on a question in which politics and law are inextricably intermingled.

All that need be said here is that Americans at Geneva are convinced that at the moment when the long-delayed entry of the United States into the Court seemed imminent the Court verdict on the Austro-German question will play directly into the hands of those opponents who are always proclaiming that to go into the Court means going into European politics.

From the Saturday Review

There was little in the judgment of The Hague Tribunal on the proposed Austro-German Customs Union to recommend the principle of arbitration in international disputes.

It may, of course, have been pure coincidence that the representatives of those Powers which took the strongest exception to the scheme held that it was illegal, but to the ordinary layman it looks as if the verdict had been dictated by POLITICAL rather than PURELY JURIDICAL considerations.

Dogs in Locked Cars

An earnest, kindly gentleman writes this letter to the Boston Evening American:

"The habit of leaving pet dogs in autos with every window closed for hours at a time is a new form of cruelty to helpless dumb animals.

"With its putrid air, gasoline and monoxide fumes and restraint of freedom, it is a sign of modern cruelty, just as the Black Hole of Calcutta was the symbol of ancient cruelty to human beings.

"Please fulminate against it."

What more needs to be said?

Except to compare these people with those who close their Summer homes at this season of the year and turn out the cats, leaving them to starve or to perish in the thickets along Cape Cod with the first blasts of Winter.

By Edgar A. Guest

Just Folks

Time

Swiftly the summer flies,
Slowly the winter goes,
Sunshine and opal skies,
Song bird and rose,
Laughter and pleasures gay,
All haste away.

Snow drift and chilling blast
Long linger on.
Slowly the days drag past
Clouds frown upon.
Time seems a leaden thing,
Waiting for spring.

Where has the summer flown?
Sadly we sigh.
Where are the joys we've known?
Now care is nigh.
And when old age draws on,
Where has youth gone?

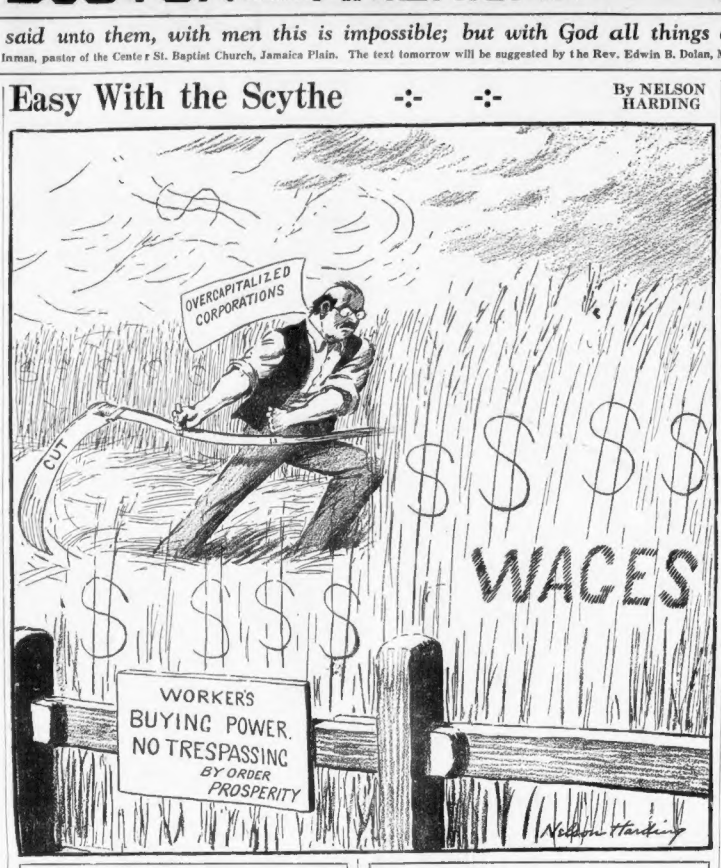
Easy With the Scythe

By NELSON HARDING



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What About Vacations?

VACATION'S OVER!

And thousands of Miserable Mamas and Pestered Papas are heaving great, glad sighs of relief. While, on the other hand, an equal number of Tormented Teachers are groaning with dismay!

Elsie Robinson

For little Willie is back at school after twelve, long lovely weeks of idleness — and is not little Willie a better and a brighter child for this lengthy relaxation?

Yes, he is NOT!

To the contrary, little Willie is a mess. His morale is shot to pieces, his manners are haywire and his health is "way off standard. Why?

Vacation is why, says Dr. Willis A. Sutton. Who is he? You'll be surprised. He is the retiring president of the National Educational Association and superintendent of schools in Atlanta, Ga.

"That's funny," you say. "School teachers are usually crazy about vacations."

Dr. Sutton is crazy, too, but not with enthusiasm. According to him, vacations are one of our major menaces.

They're a relic of the past ages—says he. All very well when children were needed to work during the summer, assisting their parents with the harvest. And there's still need of rest and change for both parents and teachers. But, listen—

"The waste and frivolity of our present system of three months cessation of mental activities is a blot on our educational escutcheon which must be removed. I cannot conceive of a more foolish thing than the idea of giving the youth of the land supervised care for six or eight hours every day and supervised study for a prolonged period of from nine to ten months and then again, on the click of the clock . . . dismiss every child to the tender mercies of the street and the playground without supervision and without care for a period of three months . . .

"For the . . . majority of children it is a waste and an extravagance and a type of relaxation that destroys the mental discipline and organization which has gone on for the past months. The children of virtually every city return to school in September exhausted in body, lowered in vitality, and thoroughly unorganized socially, intellectually, and to some extent morally."

Not to mention the wear and tear on "exhausted mothers and fathers who are exasperated over the problem of what to do with their children after the first flush of vacation is over."

And if you've just seen little Willie through a long, hard summer, you'll burst into big, wet tears of recollection as you read those understanding remarks. Oh, the agonizing hours when you were POSITIVE that the absent William had been run over by an automobile and lay, unclaimed, in the morgue! Oh, the bills for busted windows, back yard bonfires—not to mention the high cost of shoe leather and bandages. And that daily battle when you tried to refuse movie money or to insist on a 9 o'clock bed hour! Yet they say it's a Noble Joy to be a parent. Try n tell YOU!

But what to do about it? Supervised play and vacation activities, with credits given to the youngster for work done—that's Dr. Sutton's remedy. Funds? Extra teachers? teachers? Not needed, says he.

Without extra funds and with no supervision, except that given by the Parent-Teacher Association and the home itself, the Atlanta schools have carried on a Summer Activities program for the last three years.

A good idea? Why not try it in the home town? Even if it only keeps Willie off the streets, that's plenty . . . considering our streets!

New York Day by Day

On the Boardwalk

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 29—This coast resort has become a sort of Broadway peninsula. One may whisk through the Holland Tunnel—like a greased pig through a Child's—and on a straightaway road arrive from Times Square in a little more than three hours.

It has been the especial playground of theatrical folk whose engagements kept them in New York this season. They leave after the Saturday night performance and return late Monday. Consequently hotels are well filled over the week end.

But generally speaking Atlantic City, like pleasure haunts the world over, has had usual slim pickings. Broadway was represented on the boardwalk today by such figures as George S. Kaufman, Irving Caesar, George M. Cohan, Joe Frisco and Sam Harris. The Ritz is their open forum.

The most astonishing figure in a promenade along the fantastic hotel crags was a burnt black lady in decies bathing suit with a snow white fur flung like a serape across her shoulder. On a leash she had a Persian cat whose fluffy coat was dyed a light pink.

The boardwalk is a several mile narrowly planked strip of free window display. On one side its defiant hotels, pert shops, catch-penny amusement trivia and on the other the oyster white beach, ocean and projecting piers. The community, like the unceasing tide, lurches forward and back in rolling chairs.

Chairs are a dollar an hour and a fraction thereof thereafter. Its pushers form a profession distinctly apart from any other I know. Walking indeterminable miles daily in the stabbing sun, shoving their human loads, they are remindful of drudges of the water mills in ancient seridom.

Many are colored but the majority are white, some with one arm, crippled feet and otherwise malformed. Yet now and then in the flotsam is one whose niceties of speech and manner proclaim the gentleman stained by the pathos of life. As a chair pusher with head bowed he may hide from the world.

For instance, my pusher seemed utterly miscast for his role. He had more the appearance of one of those wandering scholars with knapsacks so frequently seen along the Rhine or in the German forests. Drawing up momentarily for a rest and a view of the ocean front, he pulled out a tattered volume. It was printed in French. Questioning developed he was a private language tutor, shunted, I hope only temporarily, to this depressing obscurity.

Visitors to Atlantic City are about the only folk to wear clothes. The natives, especially women and children, go through the season in bathing togs. Shortly before sundown when the sea is veined with Lucifer entire families drift to the beach for their swim. Later housewives may be seen in the kitchen in swimming attire cooking the evening meal. Husbands and children, so dressed, wait on front porches for the call to dinner.

* * *

The beach is radiantly grained with surprising handiwork of the sand artist. In base relief are sculptured pictures of Lincoln, lions, tigers, Hoover, a nobly breasted Venus, Gibson girls and forest scenes. Some are colored in fetching tints. The artist depends on pitched coins of passersby for his livelihood.

* * *

Sunburn lotions cost Atlantic City hotels staggering sums in ruined linens and towels. The stains cannot be removed and bedrooms are hung with warnings in red that patrons must pay for such damage — costs range from $3 a bedsheet to a dollar for a towel.

* * *

A beach fad for the seasonal flapper is a brown frock and floppy linen hat to match the autumnal shade of her tanned skin. One such monochrome, suggesting the carved, serene beauty of the Indian, with hair the light pulled taffy of Lyda Roberti's turns heads everywhere.

* * *

Atlantic City is a mecca for swamis and other Oriental seers. One today, suggesting a charcoal edition of Ben Ali Haggin, prophesied. "You are about to receive an unexpected business offer of great magnitude." And between leaping to the ring of the telephone and haunting the hotel telegraph office I'm fit to be tied.

Prohibition, Poverty and Politics

By Claude G. Bowers

The action of Dr. Clarence True Wilson in denouncing the men of the American Legion as indecent and "staggering drunks" does him no credit; nor does it do any credit to his cause. These "staggering drunks" in days of battle established a reputation for loyalty to this country that has not been surpassed by Dr. Wilson. Nor is there anything impressive in the charge that these men of the Legion do not stand up for the Constitution because they favor a national referendum on Prohibition.

Now there is nothing sacrosanct about Prohibition or any other national policy. The people presumably have the right, under our governmental system and theory, to determine what our national policies shall be. The Legion has merely asked that the American people have the opportunity to vote upon a governmental policy; and any one who takes the position that the people in America have no right to rule is not a good American.

Comment on Effect Of Wage Reductions

The reaction to the reduction of wages by the highly protected and powerful steel industry may discourage industrialists generally from following in its wake. If a manufacturer has had his profits wiped out, and must close his plant or reduce the wages of his men, he cannot be expected to go on operating at a loss. But if wages are to be reduced to increase profits, as in the case of the major industry that has acted, there must be no expectation of popular applause.

The official organ of the railway brotherhood has contributed to the discussion started by Mr. Green of the American Federation. Commenting on the effect of wage reductions on business it says:

"These wage losses have slowed up all business in twenty cities, broken thousands of storekeepers, driven tens of thousands of people to beg the bread they would be glad to earn. Yet we are told by the high priests of industry that a further cut of 10 per cent in their payrolls is a constructive move. If this is the best our captains of industry can do they are morally and intellectually bankrupt and it is time to look for guidance elsewhere."

And that is common sense.

The Time Has Come For Frank Speaking

We have passed the stage of the panic where it is best to whisper; the time has come for straight thinking and frank speaking. The people are impatient with this silly talk of overproduction; for every one knows that our trouble is underconsumption. The organ of the railway brotherhood tells all when it says that "there is too much of everything except buying power." And some of our business brains imagine that the thing to do is further to reduce the buying power. The organ of the railroad workers pictures the situation vividly:

"There is so much wheat that people are hungry. There is so much cotton that many folks are half naked. So much housing that in Chicago women are sleeping in the parks."

If we are going to preserve our industrial and social system a way must be found to end that scandal; and it will not be ended by taking more from the masses who are the workers, to maintain or increase the profits of the few. We are not going to save our institutions from subversive forces by accelerating the concentration of wealth. Too much concentration of wealth is our trouble now.

Colby Protests Against Postmaster-General's Speech

Bainbridge Colby, in The American, protests against the speech of Postmaster-General Brown before the National Association of Postmasters in which he practically gave them orders to exert themselves from now on for the renomination and re-election of Mr. Hoover. It was, in truth, a shocking performance. The occasion was not a Republican caucus or convention; it was presumably an assembly which had met to discuss postal problems. But the Postmaster-General was not thinking of postal problems; he was thinking of politics.

But that was just like Mr. Brown. He has been trained in the school of politics which has come to be known to America as "the Ohio gang." In 1912 he bolted the Republican convention and became one of the leaders of the Progressive Party in Ohio. But just for one campaign. He and a few like him, to whom politics means merely the loaves and fishes, soon saw after the election that there would be no picking in the Progressive Party for a while. The desertion of these men early wrecked the Progressive Party.

In the campaign of 1912 [illegible] Roosevelt, who was Mr. Brown's leader, went up and down the country denouncing the participation of postmasters and such Federal officials in the campaign. Presumably this met with the approval of Mr. Brown. His sensibilities too were shocked at the spectacle.

This makes all the more remarkable his performance when, speaking to his subordinates, he practically ordered them to give less attention to their business and more to the re-election of Mr. Hoover.

Meanwhile, civil service reformers are as silent as the grave; are they dead?

Ignores Effective Way to Brighten Hoover's Prospects

A more effective way to brighten the prospects of the President was open to Mr. Brown, but he did not choose to take it. At the moment when towns and cities are straining themselves to the utmost to find the money to furnish employment to the jobless, Mr. Brown has been refusing to fill thousands of vacancies in mail carrier and mail clerk jobs, although the money was appropriated. By doubling up the work, and reducing the efficiency of the service, some money saving can be made by Mr. Brown and the Administration; but this means less employment. At the moment the Administration is asking business men to find and give jobs to the unemployed. Mr. Brown might well fill these jobs at the disposal of the Administration, and thus better the record. But Mr. Brown, of Ohio, is of the Administration type—he thinks in terms of money.

And so these thousands of men —there are hundreds in this city alone—are still on the waiting list—and jobless.

Would it not be well for Mr. Gifford of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the head of the President's Relief Commission, to speak to the President and Mr. Brown about it?

Not long ago, when appearing before a congressional committee in reference to petitions of postoffice workers, Mr. Brown opposed their petition on the ground that when there were long lines of waiting jobless men, the men who did not like their jobs could get out.

But does President Hoover know of this order of his Postmaster-general to postmasters to get busy for the nomination and election of Mr. Hoover? And if so does he approve? And if he disapproves, would it not be well to say so?
